MUCK HELD AS ALIEN FOE; ON GRILL

Symphony Leader Cheered by Mrs. "Jack" Gardner During Crossfire by Federal Officials

Dr. Karl Muck, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, underwent extensive questioning at the Federal building today following his arrest on the charge of being an alien enemy.

He was examined by United States District Attorney Thomas J. Boynton, and United States Assistant District Attorneys Daniel A. Shea and Jold Dewey.

No formal charge was made at the conclusion of the hearing. Dr. Muck was placed in the custody of United States Marshal John J. Mitchell. It was expected he would be remanded to the East Cambridge jail.

Mrs. "Jack" Gardner, Back Bay society leader and patroness of art, called at the Federal building during the examination of the musical director. She was unable to talk with Dr. Muck, and was able to show her sympathy by a wave of the hand only. Mrs. Gardner was also unsuccessful in an attempt to see Charles A. Ellis, manager of the Symphony.

It was stated that the performance of Bach's "Passion According to St. Matthew" will be held tonight at Symphony Hall as scheduled, with Ernst Schmidt as director in place of Dr. Muck. This performance has been in preparation all Winter.

SMOKED CIGARETTES

Dr. Muck arrived at the Federal building in his own automobile, accompanied by Manager Ellis, and in charge of two agents of the Department of Justice. After circling the building four times in an effort to shake off photographers, the conductor alighted and was taken upstairs and placed in the pen. A short time later Deputy United States Marshal John Backus escorted him to a seat in the courtroom, where Dr. Muck remained smoking cigarettes until the examination began.

Dr. Muck was arrested by police officers and Department of Justice agents, as he stepped from his

HOW THE GREAT BATTLE RUNS TODAY

Heavy line shows original battle front; broken line the front as it now exists. Noyon, whose evacuation by the French was announced today, represents the farthest advance of the Germans in the direction of Paris. The British line, to the north, has been slightly further withdrawn to new positions east of Albert and Roye. (A) St. Gobain forest, where big gun bombarding Paris is supposed to be. (B) Part of French line in Chemin des Dames sector held by Americans.

U. S. PATROL SHIP HITS ROCK AND SINKS; ALL SAFE

An American scout patrol ship was sunk off the North Atlantic coast today. The vessel struck a rock and sank four hours later. It was impossible to save her.

All the members of the crew were able to reach shore in the lifeboats. The cause of the accident has not been announced.

Firing was heard off the coast at the time of the disaster, for the patrol boat signaled for help. The whole alarmed persons in the vicinity, who feared everything from a German bombardment to an earthquake.

The coast guard put out boats to assist in taking the men from the sinking ship. The boat struck, it is understood, during a heavy fog.

CONCORD MAN WOUNDED; NOW IN PARIS HOSPITAL

Word was received at Concord today that William J. Marra of that town, 101st Engineers' Train, is in a hospital at Paris with his left hand shattered, only the little finger being saved. Cause of the wound is not definitely known, but thought to be due to explosion of a hand grenade.

KAISER'S LOSSES ESTIMATED AT MORE THAN 300,000 MEN

Rome, March 26.—Italian forces have taken the aggressive in conjunction with allied troops over a good portion of the front in northern Italy.

German advance in the world battle in France was indicated by official allied announcements today that the British forces north and south of the Somme have retired to new positions east of Albert and Roye and that the French have evacuated Noyon. The British, in retiring east of Roye and Albert, established themselves in new fortified positions. UnoffcialLondon dispatches assert that, despite the terrific battering it is receiving, the allied front remains unshaken.

London gives a "conservative" estimate of German losses as between 300,000 and 350,000. It is figured that seventy German divisions are now engaged. A Berlin dispatch, via Amsterdam, says that the Germans are using tanks in the St. Quentin sector.

By International News Service.

London, March 26.—Fighting in the mighty battle in Picardy died down during the night, the British War Office reported today. The British have established themselves in new fortified positions east of Roye and Albert. The German losses are described as "appalling."

(The information that the British have taken up new positions east of Roye and Albert indicates another slight British retirement in those sectors. Roye is about six miles southwest of Nesle, which the Germans captured yesterday. Albert is ten miles southwest of Bapaume.)

By International News Service.

Paris, March 26.—Noyon has been evacuated by the French, the War Office admitted today.

The French firmly hold the left bank of the Oise river, however. (Noyon lies north of the Oise river and it was in that district that the French took over a part of the British battle line).

Violent fighting was in progress all night along the Noyon-Chauny front.

"The battle continued with great violence throughout the night, the Germans increasing their attacks along the whole of the Chauny-Noyon front," the official communique said.

"French infantry was efficiently supported by the artillery and our resistance to the German attacks greatly hampered the operations which they attempted.

"The enemy suffered heavy losses along the whole front.

"During the night the French evacuated Noyon, but the movement was carried out in perfect order.

"We still firmly hold our positions on the left bank of the Oise river."

A continuance of the violent fighting north of the Somme river was expected momentarily when

BIG ALLIED RESERVE ARMY READY TO STRIKE.

London, March 26.—The critical hour of the battle of Picardy is approaching. A big reserve army is being held behind the allies' rear and advices from the front today indicated that a strong counter offensive against the Germans might be expected soon.

GREAT BRITAIN RUSHING MORE MEN AND GUNS TO BATTLE FRONT

GERMANY'S LOSSES IN GREAT BATTLE ESTIMATED AT OVER 300,000

Field Marshal Haig made his morning report to the War Office.

The Germans have again received reinforcement and the War Office estimated today that more than 70 German divisions had been engaged in the fighting which has been raging around Bapaume and along the Somme and Oise rivers.

(It is estimated that a German division contains about 12,500 fighting men.)

"During the night fighting activity died down," the War Office report said. "British forces took up previously prepared new positions to the east of Albert and Roye. North of the Somme River a renewal of fighting is expected, but has not yet developed.

"South of the Somme the Germans have resumed their assaults against the British and French in the sectors of Chaulnes and Roye. The German losses have been appalling. They have been compelled to reinforce all parts of their front.

"It is known that over seventy German divisions have been engaged in the fighting."

The German Crown Prince is in command of the German troops north of Peronne, and it is evident from the reports of the German office that extraordinary efforts are being made to achieve a victory for his army in order to remove the blot on his military reputation that resulted from the Verdun failure. The losses attending the attacks of the Crown Prince's army are said to be appalling.

The German tactics of sending troops into battle-fire in massed formation have cost them staggering losses in the fighing which has continued night and day since the offensive opened last Thursday morning.

A conservative estimate places the German casualties at between 300,000 and 350,000 men. The Germans claim the capture of 45,000 allied prisoners of war, but even that number of prisoners in Western front fighting is out of proportion to the German losses.

Battle Rages Near Combles

The capture of Bapaume by the Germans wiped out the small British salient which lay southeast of the city, so that now the battle line is virtually straight from Combles northward to the Scarpe river.

A violent struggle is raging in the Combles sector, with the Germans trying to penetrate the British front in the direction of Albert.

The German War Office claims that the British have been driven back in the Bapaume-Peronne district to the old positions which they occupied two years ago, and that the German advance continues.

However, the Teutons are meeting with the utmost resistance and it is announced that French troops and new supplies of guns are on their way to reinforce the English.

Judging from the German claims the Kaiser's armies have advanced from twelve to sixteen miles in certain districts of their offensive. According to the German War Office reports, the fighting line now runs northward from the Oise River half-way between Noyon and Chauney, past Nesle, Liscourt, Brie, Peronne, Combles, Bapaume and Croissilles.

The German War Office insists that American troops are playing a role in the battle, stating that they were driven back, along with the British and French through a forest in the Guisecard district. (Washington advices state that General Pershing has reported that two regments of American engineers are with the British armies engaged in the gigantic battle of Picardy. Three companies of the American engineers are said to be working in the Crozat canal zone of the fighting where the Germans reported a furious struggle raging yesterday.)

Earth Shaken for Miles

The German advance at points where progress has been made is slow, considering the superior number of men and guns they have flung into the fray and the stupendous expenditure of ammunition. In the briefest lull of infantry fighting thousands of German guns go into action, their roar shaking the earth for miles as though an earthquake were raging.

It is believed that Field Marshal Haig has made preparations for strong counter attacks, and that the advanced German positions will soon be under heavy pressure if they are not already.

In his report on Monday night Field Marshal Haig said that heavy fighting continues along the front, indicating that the German thrusts which started Monday morning continued far into the night.

It has been the custom of Germans in their present drive to use the same troops throughout the day in a series of assaults, replacing them at night with fresh soldiers for a continuation of the attack after darkness has fallen.

The British commander-in-chief said that the fighting over broad sectors of the front was of "the most severe description." This was especially so of the struggle to the north and south of Bapaume and south of Peronne.

In the Bapaume sector the Germans are fighting for elevated ground, while south of Peronne they are trying to establish their position on the Somme River.

(It was south of Peronne that heavy British counter attacks resulted in flinging the Germans from the western to the eastern bank on Sunday night.)

Field Marshal Haig spoke of fresh German troops which had been brought up to the front, but their onslaught was met with gallant resistance by the brave British forces.

Conflict Continuous, Wounded British Returned Say

By International News Service.

London, March 26.—Wounded British soldiers arriving here today from the western front describe the fighting in the battle of Picardy as continuous both night and day. The Germans are attempting to break through by sheer weight of numbers and by use of an unprecedented number of guns. Millions of shells are hurled by the guns on both sides every twenty-four hours along the fifty-mile fighting front from the Scarpe River to the Oise.

Drawn Battle a Defeat for the Germans, Is New York Editorial Opinion

By International News Service.

New York, March 26.—Editorial comment on the great German thrust on the West front here today struck a note of optimism, writers pointing out that the Allies have withstood unprecedented concentrations of troops repeatedly in the past and that a drawn battle will be German defeat.

The World points out that again the German General Staff is gambling on sheer weight of men and metal and that so long as the allied line holds, nothing is lost.

"A drawn battle of the Somme would be a decisive defeat of the Germans," said the Times, "and the temper of Skelton, Ont., all of the 104th infantry, were made first lieutenants.

Orders were issued today to fill in all holes about stables and code sheds in the cantonment and instructions were also issued to soak the filled portions with crude oil. The floors of the stables must be oiled once a week and the stables, of course, cleaned daily. These orders have been issued to prevent the breeding of flies.

It was also announced today that hereafter all meats and meat products purchased outside of the commissary department will be inspected and passed upon at the office of the division meat inspector before being delivered to any of the organizations in the cantonment.

ARTILLERIST MEN ON THE RANGE

The members of the 301st Field Artillery regiment were at practice on the artillery range all morning, and the company from Rockwell City was booming of the three-inch pieces. The heavy field artillery will practice with the same guns tomorrow.

The headquarters company of "Hoot, toot, Woo," was out on the range today barking entanglements in "No man's Land" in preparation of the "over the top" maneuvers that are about to take place.

Governor Marcus Holcombe of Connecticut paid a surprise visit to the cantonment, but the nature of his visit was not made known.

Says Offensive Was Forced by Approaching Crisis in Germany

By International News Service.

Washington, March 26.—British and French officials are still jubilant over the fact that Germany has taken the offensive before the allies did. They explain it on two grounds. They say:

1—Either the German military leaders have determined that their machine can no longer be kept fit if it stands still, or—

2—That economic and political conditions within the central empires demand an immediate victory or a compromise peace in which Germany would be forced to disgorge all her conquests.

At the State Department no opinion was ventured as to what conditions prompted the German offensive. Officials seem less and less inclined to put faith in reported chiams with Germany and Austria. Most officials believe that Germany attacked because she thinks she can win. Or this a British diplomat said today:

TREMENDOUS STAKE.

Of course if they win through all their sacrifices of men will be justified from their point of view. But if they fail—and there is no sign now but that they have fail-d—they have lost a tremendous stake. They have shattered the efficiency of their machine more effectually than if they had let it stand still until we were ready to attack.

"There is no question of food stringency in Germany. Everything indicates that Germany found a bare cupboard in Ukraine and Russia.

"It must also be remembered that an Austrian railway strike is reported. That this may be the small outward sign of a widespread and grave internal condition seems to be borne out by the advertised beginnings of an Austrian offensive against Italy. Such an offensive is probably planned as much to keep Austria internally quiet as for any results that are hoped for against the shortened and thickened Italian line.

FEAR U. S. HELP.

"Perhaps nothing hurried on the Germans so much as the evidence of the determination of the United States to get its forces to Europe. This determination's latest proof was in the requisitioning of the Dutch ships. The German general staff probably realized that the American additions to the allied forces were soon to come. It was but good tactics for them to attack before they arrive.

"If the British and French lines hold, exacting their tribute of 100,000 Germans a day during this offensive, it means that the German line will be but that much easier for us when with your force with us, we make our own rush for the Rhine."

Americans at Front Are Skeptical About Paris Bombardment

By International News Service.

With the American Army in France, March 26.—Americans on the front in France are generally skeptical with regard to the seventy-mile gun which is said to be bombarding Paris. Various theories are advanced. Some believe it is a pneumatic cannon mounted on a super-Zeppelin carrying on the bombardment from an altitude of 50,000 feet.

13 OFFICERS AT CAMP DEVENS PROMOTED

JAIL DR. MUCK AS AN ENEMY ALIEN

Symphony Conductor Arrested by Federal Officers; Had Sought Passports

No. 59 Fenway.

The arrest was made following a recent visit on the part of the conductor's secretary, to the office of the clerk of the United States District Court. The secretary asked Assistant District Attorney Judd Sawyer for blank applications for passports for Dr. and Mrs. Muck to go abroad.

Following the arrest, Attorney Dewey issued this statement:

"Dr. Muck was born in Germany and being a native of Germany he comes under the head of being an alien enemy, even though he later acquired citizenship in Switzerland. We had a parallel case only last week of a man who was born in Germany, who migrated to South Africa and became a British subject. He was sent away on precisely the same grounds as we are now holding Dr. Muck."

MAY FACE OTHER CHARGES.

This statement is held to be extremely significant in view of the fact that all enemy aliens are not placed under arrest.

Dr. Muck offered no objection to going to the Back Bay police station where he was locked up pending his examination today before the authorities in the Federal building. While the charge against him is covered in the President's proclamation it is reported that other charges may be brought against him for alleged violation of two sections of the Federal code.

Washington officials declared today they had grounds on file to the effect that Dr. Muck holds anti-American sentiments. They stated that although he has asserted that the former conductor of the German royal orchestra will make no fight on the ground that he is a Swiss subject, this will not avail. It is entirely possible to deport him as an undesirable alien if he proves his Swiss citizenship, which is unlikely, it was added.

Attorney Dewey said he simply a continuation of the policy of the government to intern all dangerous aliens regardless of their social position or the number of their friends. It is stated that there are too many evidences reaching Washington that the temper of the nation is approaching the boiling point in tolerating anti-American utterances, and this action is necessary if unbridled lynching throughout the country are to be prevented.

LONG UNDER SURVEILLANCE.

Dr. Muck has been under surveillance by agents of the Department of Justice since the beginning of the war, long before the United States became a participant. It was learned that he was born in Bavaria, in 1859, and that when about eight years old his father emigrated to Switzerland. It was further learned that the musical director was engaged in German propaganda work, it is said, and a close watch was kept on him.

The attention of the public was first directed to Mr. Muck in October of last year, when reports were circulated to the effect that he had refused to lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the rendition of the "Star-Spangled Banner" at Providence. In justice to the conductor, it may be said that, according to Major Henry L. Higginson, Dr. Muck knew nothing of the request that the national anthem be played.

On November 2 at Symphony Hall in Boston, the orchestra, with Dr. Muck leading, precipitated a tremendous patriotic demonstration by playing "The Star Spangled Banner."

In the meantime the Symphony Orchestra was forbidden to play in Washington, Baltimore, Pittsburgh, Detroit and Springfield, and a strong protest was made in New York over Dr. Muck's appearance.

COUNTER DRIVE IS AWAITED BY WASHINGTON

Army Chiefs Admit Dangerous Possibilities, Are Eager to See Haig Turn on Foe

By International News Service.

Washington, March 26.—Until the Anglo-French forces on the western front can launch a counter offensive which will check the German drive the situation must remain critical, in the opinion of army officers here today. The outlook, while somewhat improved, is fraught with many dangerous possibilities.

The very presence on the German side of practically every German general officer who has won success during the present war emphasized the importance which Germany attaches to the great battle, officers here say.

They continue hopeful of the final outcome, but maintain that it is far too early yet to tell with any degree of certainty whether the German push has attained its maximum.

In this very connection officers here are divided as to the exact German objective. Many think it is to pave the way for a sweeping drive on Paris. Others think that the Channel ports are the goal the German staff. Either is possible at present, it is pointed out.

MUST ATTACK SOON.

That the Anglo-French counter offensive must be developed in the near future is the opinion of the majority of the officers here. They say that Haig now has sufficient reinforcements in men and guns to sharply stiffen his resistance in the vicinity of Bapaume. If this is true, they should be making their presence felt in the very very near future.

One thing which stands out as of the utmost importance is the manner in which the Germans are utilizing their artillery. In this connection, officers here say they are establishing new records. It is believed here that they must have put into use a new sort of gun of an extremely mobile type, which will explain the fact that all of the reports that the artillery is at all times almost on the heels of the infantry advance.

TESTING OUT ARTILLERY.

The German artillery now is being tested out against the British fortified positions east of Itove and Albert. Along this line the allied forces can be expected to hold, officials say, unless something unexpected develops.

A minority of officers here believe that the first German objective may have been passed and that they can now be expected to begin consolidation endeavor to hold them.

Officials of both and British embassies officials say their dispatches indicate no very important changes and that they still feel confident that the drive will fail in its objective. They also urge that we emphasize the enormous German losses, which are far out of proportion to the successes gained.

NOTHING FROM AMERICANS

There was no further word from General Pershing today regarding the participation of American forces in the struggle. Only two regiments of engineers—railway and forestry workers—are involved. There also are three companies of engineers in the vicinity of the Crozat canal which, it is assumed, have been in the thickest of the fight. Such information as the American commander-in-chief withers directly can be made public now.

OPTIMISM AT WHITE HOUSE.

The confidential information showing the progress of the struggle which is received by him from the British and French commanders-in-chief is transmitted simply for the information of President Wilson, the acting secretary of war and the general staff. It is plainly evident from the general feeling of optimism which is in evidence at the White House and the War Department that the news is at least reassuring.

It is understood that all the reports emphasize that it will be entirely possible to hold the designated strategic line when it is reached regardless of the number of men the Germans may throw into action.

The apparent advantage in men and guns which the British have sustained, if the German figures are accurate, and no one here is disposed to question them, is not a serious disaster, officials say. These men have had to be sacrificed by being ordered to hold certain advanced positions until actually overwhelmed. The guns were sacrificed in the same manner, the time gained for distributing the forces which had been withdrawn being worth more than either the men or the guns, the officers here declared.

SPEED UP U. S. PLANS.

The developments in the West have done much to speed up the American war preparations. At every cantonment in the country where troops are assembled awaiting transfer overseas, the officers commanding are pushing their subordinates to the limit so that there can be no delay in getting them across. Many of the divisions would be ready to take their places on the firing line and nothing will be allowed to interfere with their transfer overseas.

Compulsory military training sentiment and plans for a greatly increased National Army have been greatly advanced by the German offensive. The majority of senators and representatives are now seriously considering reversing their position which has been that the draft plans were big enough and are discussing further measures to give the nation more men and still more men for the task confronting it. Action along this line in the near future is confidently expected.

AMERICANS ENGAGED.

The Pershing cablegram, made public by Major-General Peyton C. March, was as follows:

"Summary of activities covering the period between noon, March 24, and noon, March 25:

"Nothing to report beyond the usual patrol and trench activity with some artillery shelling by the enemy north of Toul.

"References to the German communiques of the 24th and 25th, regarding American troops:

"Two regiments of railroad engineers and the British armies involved in the battle. Three companies were working with the armies mentioned in the communiques in the vicinity of the Crozat canal.

"One report other than the German communiques yet received regarding these troops.

(Signed) "PERSHING."

CAMBRIDGE ODD FELLOWS TO HOLD WHIST PARTY

Cambridge Lodge No. 13, I. O. O. F., will hold a whist party in its lodge room, Odd Fellows' Hall, Cambridgeport, following its meeting tonight. Treasurer W. W. Dowsing is chairman of the committee on arrangements.

Germany's Foremost War Lords Now on Western Front

Amsterdam, March 26.—All of Germany's foremost military leaders, with the possible exception of Field Marshal von Mackensen, are now on the western front. German headquarters are said to be established temporarily at St. Quentin.

In addition to the Kaiser and the Crown Prince, Field Marshal von Hindenburg, Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria, General von Ludendorff and scores of lesser generals are on the western front between the Aisne River and the North Sea.

MAXIM GUN TO REACH BERLIN FROM LONDON

Inventor Says He Can Build One, If Allies Want to Pay the Price.

By International News Service.

New York, March 26.—Hudson Maxim, the inventor, declared today that he can construct a cannon that will shoot from London to Berlin, thus outclassing the reported big gun of the Germans which has been bombarding Paris. He added that it was a mere matter of the allies paying the price for such a gun, and that he did not consider the expense would be warranted.

Mr. Maxim characterized as absurd the theory that the German gun fires a 9-inch shell 76 miles at a practically flat trajectory. He punctured the claim that a shell would fall practically "dead" or inert, after traveling that many miles and after having described the parabola necessary to attain the distance.

"The rumor that the shells go no higher than 15 miles is also incredible," said the inventor. "Even if the maximum altitude were 20 miles, those shells would fall at a high velocity. Just fancy anything falling 15 miles and landing lightly! It's absurd. As a matter of fact, they will probably find that those shells go to a maximum altitude of 40 miles."

Mr. Maxim said, after declaring he could build a gun that would carry from London to Berlin:

"I would not urge any such plan. I do not believe the game would be worth the powder. The thing comes under the head of freak artillery, which is just where the gun belongs."

3 NEW REST STATIONS OPENED BY RED CROSS

Reports from Major James H. Perkins, American Red Cross commissioner to Europe, show that three new rest stations, each feeding about 600 men a day, have been opened. A hospital for men of the navy was opened by the commission and a home for convalescent officers and nurses on the Riviera. The eight-day drive of the Boston Metropolitan Chapter for $12,000 pounds of warm clothing for war sufferers has ended. Final figures will not be ready for several days. The Red Cross needs more men over the age of thirty-one for transportation service in Serbia. Recruiting headquarters are at No. 470 Boylston street.

ARMY TO ABOLISH THE HISTORIC MUSTER ROLL

Washington, March 26.—The muster roll, that time-honored bi-monthly bane of the U. S. army company commander, has been doomed by the War Department, A general order will shortly be issued providing for commutation of Adjutant-General McCain's doing away with this and numerous other requirements which have heretofore resulted in a lot of unnecessary work for the limited clerical force of army line officers.

MRS. FRENCH'S LOVE NOTES READ IN $80,000 SUIT AGAINST EMERY

"BLESS YOUR DEAR HEART;" "BEST FRIEND WOMAN EVER HAD," SHE WROTE

By ELIZABETH ELLAM.

Letters in which appeared such phrases as "Bless your dear old heart," "No one will ever fill your place in my heart," and "You have been the best friend any woman ever had," featured the evidence today in the suit for alleged breach of promise to marry, in which Mrs. Mary E. French seeks to recover $80,000 from John A. Emery. The suit is being heard in the Superior Court.

Mrs. French, an attractive woman of forty-one, modishly gowned, identified letters presented her by Fletcher Ranney, counsel for Mr. Emery, a retired Boston business man, as written by her from Magnolia, when she was working on the North Shore during the Summer months of 1913.

The witness testified that letters were sent to Mr. Emery's office in Devonshire street, instead of to his house address, because someone was fond of opening his mail.

Continuing his cross-examination of the witness today, Attorney Ranney questioned as follows:

TELLS OF HER ILLNESS.

Q.—Did I understand you to say that there was other property in New Bedford in which a Mrs. Dobson was interested? A.—There was a Mrs. Dobson.

Q.—Did you see her? A.—I never did.

Q.—Did I understand you to say that he said something about Mrs. Bacheller being a servant? A.—Mr. Emery told me she was a housekeeper that was put in to look after the property in the Summer, when she was away.

Questioned regarding her various illnesses, she said she had diphtheria in 1907, later had a surgical operation, and suffered a nervous breakdown in 1910.

Q.—When, in 1912, there was again some talk of marriage between you and Mr. Emery, you practically agreed to its postponement, did you not? A.—I said I would be very glad to have it take place.

Q.—But you agreed to its postponement until this Fall? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you attend the Harvard-Yale boat race in New London in 1914 with Mr. Emery? A.—No, I went with my aunt.

Q.—Were you not around with a young man at that time? A.—He may have been with the party. There were several.

Q.—You never had but one at a time, did you? A.—I never had any except John A. Emery. I had numerous friends.

Q.—Do you remember signing any paper at the International Trust Company releasing any claim upon him? A.—No, I did not.

Q.—Did you ever sign any such paper at the request of Mr. Emery? A.—No, I did not.

THE BOAT RACE PARTY

John T. Leahy, counsel for Mrs. French, then continued his examination:

Q.—You remember that party at the boat race in 1914 perfectly, do you not? Whose party was it? A.—Mrs. Shepard's party.

Q.—How many were in it? A.—There were seven—four women, two men and a boy. We started from Mrs. Shepard's home in Putnam, Ct.

Q.—Was there any impropriety in that party? A.—None whatever.

Q.—Was there any impropriety during your engagement to Mr. Emery or with any other man? A.—None whatever.

Mrs. French further testified that Mr. Emery acted as her "man of affairs," and identified a book as one that Mr. Emery had given her to keep her accounts.

Mrs. Josephine Shorthall of Pottsville, Pa., a cousin of Mrs. French, was the first witness called. She testified to working for Mrs. French, keeping books and paying the help.

Q.—While with Mrs. French, did you meet Mr. Emery? A.—I did.

Q.—Did he call at the apartment often? A.—He came almost every afternoon, and I never went to Mrs. French's home in the evening that he wasn't there.

Q.—Did you ever receive checks for Mrs. Murch? A.—I did; only occasionally.

Q.—What did Mrs. French do with checks when she received them? A.—Mrs. French turned them over to Mr. Emery.

A NEW YEAR'S PARTY

Mrs. Shortall then told of a party attended by five women and Mr. Emery.

Q.—Was something said? A.—Something was said about its being a New Year's party and Mr. Emery said it wasn't a New Year's party but an engagement party to celebrate his engagement to Mrs. French. Mrs. French said something to the effect that she was married and he said he would fix that."

Mr. Leahy finished his direct examination and Mr. Ranny cross-examined.

Q.—Did you mean to tell me that Mrs. French did not keep any of her checks for her own use? A.—She did not.

Q.—Don't you know that Mr. Emery's checks, indorsed by Mrs. French, were used to pay bills owed by her in Boston and New York? A.—Possibly.

Q.—In regard to the 1918 party, do you remember how Mr. Emery was dressed? Did he wear a tie? A. I do not know.

Q.—Couldn't you see whether he wore a tie under his long white beard? A. If he had a long white beard, I couldn't notice a tie.

Q.—Well, when he moved his chin up and down, you could, could you not? A.—He had no particular chin motion. His conversation was chiefly in monosyllables.

Q.—Then his speech about the engagement was a long speech for him? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did anyone else join in the felicitations? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you think it strange that any married lady should be having an engagement party? A.—No.

Q.—Was George there? A.—I am sure he was not there.

HER AUNT TESTIFIES.

Mrs. Janet Shepard of Brooklyn, N. Y., an aunt of Mrs. French, was the next witness called. Mrs. Shepard, examined by Attorney Leahy, related a conversation she had with Mr. Emery, regarding his marriage.

"I said, 'Now she will soon be free, to be married to you, if you want her.' And he said, 'As soon as she is free, we will be married.'"

Later, Mrs. Shepard said in her testimony she had one other conversation with Mr. Emery in regard to the marriage.

"I said, 'Do you intend to fulfill your promise to my niece?' And he said, 'As soon as I have my business affairs in shape, so I can retire.'"

Mr. Ranney, cross-examining:

Q.—How many were in the party that went to the boat race in New London? A.—There were four men, Mrs. French and two New York friends of mine.

Q.—Did Mrs. French ever visit your home in company with a Boston attorney? A.—Only in company with many other people.

Q.—Did Mrs. French invite this young man? A.—I always invite my own guests to my own home, Mr. Ranney.

Mrs. Winifred Rogers, who is the Winifred Carroll referred to as being in the parties at Mrs. French's home, was the next witness. Mrs. Rogers' home is now in Alabama.

EAST BOSTON WANTS WATERFRONT PARK

An appeal to Mayor Peters to establish an adequate waterfront playground in East Boston was made by Representative William H. Hearn today.

Mr. Hearn, in his appeal, said that the movement for the development of East Boston was begun in 1911 and resulted in the establishment of bathhouses and the improvement of Wood Island Park.

But the reclamation of Jeffries Point land by the Waterways Commission has nullified the old scheme of improvement, he said. Bathhouses have been taken away and the swimming pools have been made unsanitary and dangerous.

Mr. Hearn appealed to Mayor Peters to fulfill his inaugural promise to develop the playgrounds of the city.

MORGAN MEMORIAL PAID $100,000 WAGES

The Morgan Memorial, although it paid out $100,000 in wages, furnishing temporary employment to 3,000 persons and permanent work to 145 last year, was more than self-supporting, according to the annual report of the treasurer. Cast-off clothing, furniture and the like, donated to the institution, brought an income of $173,281.89. The sale of this clothing and furniture, renovated and repaired, not only gave the poor of the community an opportunity to supply their needs at very low cost, but paid all expenses. All departments of the Memorial showed a gratifying growth during the year.

ACCUSE AUTO DEALER OF ENTICING GIRL AWAY

Concord, N. H., March 26.—Fred Vickery, 30 years old, an Auburn, Me., automobile dealer, was brought here today in custody of Deputy U. S. Marshal Flanagan, charged with violation of the Mann "white slave" law. It is alleged that Vickery induced Barbara Martin, 22 years old, to accompany him from Auburn to Portsmouth, N. H. The young woman is very attractive and was fashionably dressed when taken into custody. Vickery will be arraigned before U. S. Commissioner Burns T. Hodgman.

TAKE DIN FROM DINNER IS ORDER IN CHICAGO

Chicago, March 26.—War between the saloons and cabarets caused the introduction of an ordinance in the Council today which threatens death for the Jazz, lightly clothed corpses and the fox trot.

Secretary Daniels rules that the cabarets must go or every saloon in the military zone must close. This rule lists 800 saloons and bars in all the leading hotels. Take the din out of dinner is the only answer, saloon and brewery men contend.

3D LOAN SUBSCRIBERS TO GET BADGE OF HONOR

New York, March 26.—Subscribers to the third Liberty loan will receive a badge of honor, it was announced by the Publicity Department of the war loan organization here. The button will have a brilliant red border with white inscriptions "Third Liberty Loan." In the centre is a miniature picture of the Liberty bell.

Aproximately 16,000,000 of these badges of honor will be given only to persons buying two or more bonds.

MID-WEST WAVE AGAINST ALL PRO-GERMANS

Scores Forced to Kiss the Flag by Irate Citizens; Woman Ridden on Rail

By International News Service.

Chicago, March 26.—A concerted drive on pro-Germans and disloyalists by those in authority and by many who are not, but who are imbued with strong ideas of Americanism, is on today in the Middle West.

The action of police and private citizens is also held as an indication that the present German drive on the western front has intensified the war spirit of loyal Middle Westerners.

With seventy-five men in jail here today, the police made short work of local celebrations in honor of German "victories."

At Benton, Ill., irate citizens rode a woman of Bohemian birth out of town on a rail. She was charged with disloyalty.

At Delphos, O., great excitement prevails, the loyal citizens making a house-to-house tour and dragging all pro-Germans out and forcing them to kiss the flag.

Duquoin, Ill., reports that four men were forced to kiss the flag.

From Cloquet, Minn., comes news that George Sahlman, charged with disloyalty, was taken into the country and beaten.

Duluth citizens who were warned in letters because of their alleged disloyalty were tarred and feathered by the Minnesota branch of the Knights of Liberty.

At Miami, Okla., an alleged German sympathizer was compelled to kiss a soldier's shoulders four times and then salute him ten times.

At Minot, N. D., the Minot Daily News "played up" the report that the British were not holding and a large crowd painted the office yellow and adorned it with the words "Kaiser" and "Slacker."

Prominent business men at Gary raided the rectory of St. John's Evangelical church at Tolleston and warned the pastor, Rev. Martin Lienk, that seditious conduct had been punished in Illinois by sudden tar and feather parties.

BELGIAN BOYS KILLED AT WORK ON GERMAN FRONT

MAYOR EXPLAINS WHY HIGH TAX IS NEEDED

Limit Must Be Raised Temporarily to Meet Increase in City Expenses

Mayor Peters, in an address before the Hyde Park Board of Trade, in Howe Hall, Hyde Park, declared that there is not a cent in the city treasury, where there should be a million dollars or more, and explained in full his views on raising the tax rate of the city $3 for the coming year.

The Mayor said:

"When you understand the difference between tax rate and tax limit the whole system of taxation is easily grasped.

The Mayor and City Council make up the annual budget or expense sheet of the various city departments each year except in the matter of school appropriations. The amount that may be appropriated is determined by law and the amount is derived from three principal sources.

First, the unexpended or unappropriated cash left in the city treasury from the preceding year may be appropriated.

Second, the estimated income of the city other than taxes.

Third, then there may be an appropriation made by levying a tax of $11.02 on each thousand dollars average valuation for the preceding three years less abatements.

CITY FORCED TO BORROW.

"First, unexpended balance. I said that this may be appropriated, but at the beginning of this year there was not a dollar left unappropriated in the city treasury. In fact, at the beginning of my administration the city was compelled to borrow immediately in anticipation of taxes to meet expenses already incurred last year there was an unexpended balance of $1,182,721.64.

"Second, estimated income. This comes from sources other than taxes, and may be appropriated in the annual budget. This estimated income is that which is derived from the workings of the various city departments, as, for instance, liquor licenses and fees. Taxes on property and money received from the State as the city's share in the income tax may not be considered in making up the annual appropriation bill or budget. The estimated income other than taxes is roughly placed at about $5,000,000 a year.

"Third—This is generally called the tax limit of Boston, regulated by the Legislature, and therefore we are asking the Legislature this year to make a change. The law allows the levying of a tax of $11.02 per thousand on the average valuation for the three preceding years, $4.50 of which is to be used by the schools and $6.52 by the other city departments.

DECREASE IN VALUATION.

"The average valuation in Boston is about $1,500,000,000, and the average yearly increase is set at about $30,000,000. This year, however there is a decrease in the average valuation and it is expected for the next two years this decrease will continue, after which as a result of increased building, scientific assessing, and new enterprises, the regular average increases will make themselves felt.

"One great cause of this decrease is due to the fact that the city is not allowed to tax incomes and intangible properties, as the State now has that power under the Income Tax law.

"The amount of loss to the city of Boston in intangible taxable properties is roughly estimated at $141,000,000, making a loss in taxes of about $3,000,000.

"Of course, later on the city will receive from the State, as provided in the provisions of the Income Tax law, its proportion, and it is expected that Boston will receive as its share even a greater amount than the $3,000,000. The point I wish to make, however, is that this year the city government loses the power of appropriation of this $3,000,000.

HOW THE CITY STANDS.

"Now let us see what we have lost. A brief statement will show to you the dilemma in which the city of Boston is placed. Here it is: First, no cash in the city treasury where there should have been a million or more; second, a loss of $3,000,000 by the operation of the income tax law.

"In addition, my administration was early brought face to face with radical increases in other items. For instance, for the firemen's one day off in three; for laborers' increase of pay to $3 per day; for war relief; for dependent mother's aid increase; and deficiency in ways and means as compared with 1917; a great increase in the cost of materials, etc. The city has to get $4,632,977.33.

"There was only one thing to do, and that was to ask for an increase in the tax limit from $11.02 to $14.02, an increase of $3 for one year in order to meet the additional increases levied against the city.

"That is what is known as the tax limit of Boston, and not the tax rate of Boston. In fact, it would be possible to increase the tax limit of Boston and yet have a decrease in the tax rate."

GIRL ACCUSED MANSTER, SAYS PELLETIER

Sweetheart First to Point to Him as Slayer, Prosecutor Declares

Harry H. Manster's own sweetheart was the first person to accuse him of murder, according to a dramatic declaration of District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier in his opening address to the jury at the trial today of Manster for the fatal shooting of Mounted Patrolman Joseph C. Reiser.

The address was followed by the taking of testimony.

At the close of his address Mr. Pelletier asked in low tone:

"And who was the first person to accuse this man of murder?"

With raised voice and finger levelled at Manster, the public prosecutor exclaimed:

"His sweetheart!"

Manster showed his first sign of emotion since put on trial. Tears welled to his eyes.

Speaking of circumstantial evidence, Mr. Pelletier called upon any juror who could not accept this form of evidence to make his weakness known" and be dismissed from the jury.

QUOTES MOSAIC LAW

He mentioned the Mosaic law which requires that no person shall be adjudged guilty of a crime unless two witnesses saw him commit the deed. He wished any juror who believed only in that law to leave the panel.

He added: "Circumstantial evidence has been declared by men highest in the law as the highest type of evidence."

The District Attorney said that no person saw Manster shoot Reiser. He said Reiser, a police officer, went to the apartment house at No. 197 Jersey street on Sunday afternoon, January 20 and that this was the last seen of him alive—or at least that he was unconscious when found dying. Mr. Pelletier went on in part:

"It is for the Commonwealth to show you that Reiser did not commit suicide, that he did not die by accident, that he was killed by some outside agency.

"We will show you that Reiser and the defendant knew each other, that Reiser was assigned by his superior officer to run down and arrest a man who was breaking into apartment houses.

"We will show you that Reiser was on this man's track and will show you statements from this man's own lips that he was a sneak thief and a house thief.

HEARD FATAL SHOT.

"We will show you that in this telephone booth, which you saw in the apartment house yesterday, was a woman and that, when she was coming out of the booth, this man was going up the stairs.

"We will show you that she was going upstairs, too, right behind him, but she didn't know she was following a sneak thief.

"We will show that she saw him go down the landing toward a door leading toward an apartment; that she looked down after him and, thinking he was going through the door, went into her own home.

"Some time after that shots were heard. Six shots were fired. We showed you yesterday the holes where the bullets entered. We have the shells for six of the shots and the bullets for five.

"Manster made an awful mistake of lying when he left the house, and that is going to convict him in this case. He said to a woman, on leaving the house: 'A man has been shot. I am going for a doctor.'

"We will show you that, after the shoting, Manster met occupants of the house, that he told one woman that a man was shot, that he said to another woman: 'Now don't tell anybody you saw me here,' and to another: 'A man has fallen down and wounded himself,' and that this woman said: 'Oh, no! Shots were fired.'"

ARREST DOCTOR AFTER CONFESSION BY GIRL

Pawtucket, March 26.—Dr. Walter H. Johnson, fifty-two, tried to end his life when placed under arrest with his wife, Eva, at their home on Bisson street.

He is charged with illegal surgery on Mary McPhillips, thirty, of Brook street.

According to Lieutenant D. S. Ballou, who served the warrant, Johnson hurried into an adjoining room, followed by the lieutenant, who forcibly took a loaded revolver from the doctor. The doctor and his wife were taken to headquarters.

The arrest caused a sensation in the city, where Johnson has practiced medicine for thirty years. The charge followed an alleged confession made by the young woman, who called in Dr. H. L. Towle. He would not prescribe until the woman's story was reduced to writing.

GAYNOR PUTS ESTATE IN TRUST BEFORE MARRYING

New York, March 26.—Rufus W. Gaynor, son of the late Mayor Gaynor, put his entire estate in trust, turning what he inherited from his father over to the King's County Trust Company, before marrying. The deed was recorded Saturday. On that day he married Miss Margaret Haskell.

The estate consists of extensive realty holdings in downtown Brooklyn and stocks and bonds. The deed makes immediate provision for the payment of $15,000 in cash, and the payment on February 1, 1919, of $2,000. The latter sum is to be paid annually thereafter.

Buy Coal Now Or Go Short Next Winter, Garfield Warns

By International News Service.

Washington, March 26.—Warning is given by Dr. Harry A. Garfield, the fuel administrator, that the people must begin to buy their coal April 1 or face a desperate shortage next Winter.

All the machinery of the administration is ready, he says, that the small dealer and the consumer will have ample coal to carry him through the [illegible].

The railroad administration and the fuel administration have so coordinated production and transportation as to provide for all needs.

But the people, Dr. Garfield said, must fall in with the spirit of the plan laid down and begin to buy immediately so there can be an equal distribution through the Summer.

McADOO WANTS MORE MONEY FOR ALLIES

Asks $1,500,000,000 More to Keep Up $500,000,000 Monthly Advance Until Fall

By International News Service.

Washington, March 26.—Authorization of $1,500,000,000 additional for loans to the Allies during the coming Summer was asked when Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo revealed additional details of the third Liberty loan plans to the House ways and means committee today.

The secretary explained that of the original $7,000,000,000 authorized for these loans, only $1,000,000,000 remains to be expended, and at the present rate of disbursement, $500,000,000 per month, this sum will be exhausted by the end of the fiscal year, June 30. The additional amount asked will provide for loans up to the end of September at the same rate.

SPEED UP NEW LAWS.

Secretary McAdoo will make known to the ways and means committee tomorrow the amount of additional treasury certificates of indebtedness he desires to issue.

With the Third Liberty Loan figure fixed at "three billion dollars and over subscriptions," the machinery for its authorization was speeded up today. Majority Leader Kitchin and the House Ways and Means Committee began preparation of the necessary legislation which will be rushed through Congress so that subscriptions may open as planned on April 6.

The legislation will include the necessary authority to fix the interest rate at 4¼ per cent, and for the creation of a sinking fund with which the parity of bond issue can be maintained.

ESTIMATES EXCESSIVE.

One very significant result of the conference between Secretary McAdoo and Majority Leader Kitchin here was the statement that the estimates of necessary expenditures by both the United States and the allies have been too large. This has resulted in a very much smaller bond issue being planned than had been deemed necessary.

The new issue will not be convertible, indicating that the interest rate, 4¼ per cent, will prevail on all further bond issues needed.

ARMY BRIDE, LONELY, ENDS LIFE BY POISON

Mrs. Ruth W. Coulp, 19 years old, bride of a member of the 56th Heavy Artillery, died at the East Boston Relief Station today as the result of taking poison following her husband's departure for France.

The young woman, who was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred A. Harris of No. 77 Congress avenue, Chelsea, became despondent when Private Clarence Coulp was ordered abroad with his regiment, which is composed of men from the harbor forts. After calling her parents by phone from the home of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Coulp, No. 60 Neptune road, East Boston, she took poison. Dr. James H. Strong ordered her removal to the East Boston hospital.

METROPOLITAN OPERA PLAN FOR SEATING IS APPROVED

The advertised plan of the grouping of two sets of four performances each for the sale of subscription seats for the eight performances of grand opera to be given by the Metropolitan Opera Company during the week of April 22, has met with instant response by patrons who welcome this ingenious grouping. They are divided into Series A and Series B.

Those of A series include "Le Prophete," "Aida," "L'Oracolo" and "Pagliacci" (double bill), and "I Puritani," and those of Series B, "Tosca," "Rigoletto," "Madame Butterfly" and "Samson et Dalila," thus making for each a most admirable combination. All mail applications must be made to Mr. Fred E. Pond at the Boston Opera House.

To Lecture on Iceland

Waterman S. C. Russell will tell of "Horseback tours through Iceland" Friday afternoon before the Waltham Woman's Club. Mr. Russell has spent four summers in Iceland.

FORGET FRILLS FOR SERIOUS WAR WORK

Languishing, Tangoing Boston Society Girl a Being of the Past

By MARIE DUNBAR

The frivolous feminine would has been turned [illegible]. The war is responsible for the revolution on frills.

The Boston girl of the Spring of 1918 has wiped out almost every characteristic of her sister of the Spring of 1917. The languishing tangoing maiden of a year ago is in the discard. She finds no place in Boston society. The reception accorded her by the Boston woman is cool.

Teas, receptions, dansants and the theatre kept the maiden of 1917 in a whirl of excitement. Her most harassing worry was the modiste who would fashion her next gown. The thing on which she premeditated the longest was just what she should do to amuse herself next.

This same maiden found herself tired at the end of a day during which she had done nothing. Bored with her [illegible] she would then dance away the hours of the evening. One day was the wild whirlwind replica of the day before.

DISCARD SOCIAL JOYS

Then the war cloud came, then war itself. Did this young woman of gayety who led a butterfly existence wring her hands and stand in dismay and despair?

The 1917 pleasure-loving young woman without a sign discarded her social joys. One by one she placed them on the shelf. One by one she gave them [illegible]. She had new interests.

The transformation [illegible] magic. The knitting [illegible] Red Cross work [illegible] and thousands of [illegible] was to the war [illegible] [illegible]. Performance [illegible] ways [illegible] her nature.

The maiden of 1917 [illegible] dawn, wondering [illegible] would do to fill the [illegible] day. The maiden of 1918 [illegible] she is to accomplish [illegible] the tasks which are on her [illegible] day.

Where formerly Mary [illegible] social calendar, demanding that she make certain calls and attend certain social functions, held first place in her daily life, now it is replaced by her "war" calendar.

VISITS WOUNDED.

This "war" calendar may instruct Miss Mary to visit the family of some soldier, the father of which has been wounded in service.

This same calendar may remind Mary that one day she will spend preparing surgical dressings, another day she will work at the Red Cross Luncheon rooms.

She will drop in to show some one how to make Liberty bread on another day. Mary will even traverse the streets collecting money for various funds.

The social calendar is dust covered. The "war" calendar is thumb marked and worn.

"No, we aren't doing any entertaining this Winter," is Mary's stock answer to any inquiry of large social functions. "We are too busy with knitting, Red Cross work and war work in general."

If Mary's own mother had gone away for a year and then come back she would not have known her own daughter. The change from the gay, lighted-hearted girl to the serious, earnest woman would keep the cleverest mother guessing.

And Mary hasn't tired as the novelty of her work has worn off. She has proven herself a sturdy soldier-ette. She holds her head just a little bit higher at the thought that she is really a part of the great army behind the lines.

And what do the women of Boston think of this new type of womanhood which has come upon them so suddenly that they still gasp for breath.

CHANGE COMMENDABLE.

"The change in the young women and their work is very commendable," remarks Mrs. Henry H. [illegible], wife of [illegible] Administrator [illegible]. "I think all the Boston women have noticed the manner in which the pleasure loving girls have done real work. This will lead largely to create a higher type of womanhood."

And hundreds of Boston women will resound Mrs. Endicott's statement. They have noticed this transformation.

"I knew that the girls would arise to the occasion," is the statement of Mrs. John Hatch, one of the prominent leaders in the Women's Activities in this city. "I knew when something big came along that the women of Boston would be wide awake to the situation.

BRINGING OUT BEST.

"I know, too, that this war is bringing out the very best there is in our young women. The ability they have developed along certain lines has been a surprise to the girls themselves and is encouraging them to extend their activities," concluded Mrs. Hatch.

The girl of 1918 is here to stay. She has forbidden her frivolous sister of 1917 to return.

When the boys come marching home from their victories abroad they will find a new feminism, a sincere feminism.

"This maiden of 1918 is the girl of today and the girl of tomorrow."

FLOOD OF PETITIONS DEMANDS PUBLIC CONTROL OF THE 'L'

A pile of petitions mountain high, with a total of more than 55,000 signatures, is indisputable evidence of the tremendous and widespread public support of the Public Control bill for better service on the Boston Elevated Railway.

Rolling in every day by the thousands to the Petition Editor, the signatures are as visibly as public opinion that the reign of private management is about to cease and that the public must restore for the benefit of the public the service which has broken down admittedly under private operation.

There seems to be no end to the petitions. They arrive in hundreds by every mail; they are brought into the office by enthusiastic workers, they come from factories, department stores and shops where the workers are busy and their signatures all the better bear witness to the rebellion with the private control that has forfeited and have decided they have had enough of it.

There is no waning in the enthusiasm. The number of petitions that arrive daily grows greater. No backsliding body will ever have a more forceful argument of the solid and individual support given to any measure than the Massachusetts Legislature will receive when the great mass of these petitions is placed before Senate and House.

PUBLIC CONTROL ONLY HELP.

Leading citizens in practically every section of Boston have declared that a public control only lies the hope for better service for Boston and its suburbs. They declare that to give relief without insisting that the public should control in the interests of the public would be to perpetuate the history of bad service on the Elevated lines.

At the same time, that belief is afforded the public under a guarantee of better service, the interests of the stockholders are safeguarded and they are guaranteed 6 per cent rate of interest.

With all this in mind there is no reason why anyone should refuse to sign the petitions. And volunteer workers by the score regret that men are willing, even eager, to sign and that the man who refuses is rare, the exception.

Raymond P. Belain, president of the Worcester Board of Trade, who has been one of the foremost men of the city to wage war on the Elevated for its bad service and to bring about some improvements, declares that public control is the only real plan for better service that will give the public and the investor alike. He warns the people against being deceived by other so-called "service at cost" bills. He says:

"The most important thing to be done at this moment in relation to the Elevated question and the pending legislation for relief for both the road and the public is to have the people set right as to the proposed relief legislation.

"The public control bill, as recommended by the Public Service Commission and endorsed by so many representative and public-spirited citizens and organizations, is the only real service at cost plan.

"The so-called, or rather misnamed "Service at Cost Bills" which have emanated from the Security Holders League, through Mr. Loring and through the attorneys for the present Elevated management and the banking interests back of it, are not bona fide service at cost measures, but are rather "service at expense" schemes.

MANY PERSONS MISLED.

"These schemes provide for an entirely different plan than service at cost and many persons are misled and befogged and bewildered by the publicity which is interpreted as recommending the Loring plan when, as a matter of fact, this publicity rightly read is in fact an endorsement of the public control service at cost plan.

"No amount of argument can convince anybody, except those so blind to see that they cannot see or hear, that to continue the present situation and management with increased capital and unregulated and unrestricted power will correct conditions. It is apparent that such a course will only prolong and augment the already intolerable financial service conditions.

"Cleveland's service at cost much quoted street railroad operation is public control service at cost operation and not service at expense operation. The history of street railroading like that of steam railroading for forty years has proven conclusively that there is no margin between the service and the utility sufficient to allow any foreign or intermediate person, corporation or group of exploiters to control these utilities for the purpose of extracting a part of the revenues paid in by the public. It is all needed to give satisfactory service, and when dividends paid for and controlled to those served, the problem of management, return on capital invested and service will be solved.

"To protect and guarantee the best possible recompense to the 5,226 Massachusetts stockholders in a total of 7,348 stockholders, and to save the most for the depositors in our Massachusetts savings banks whose deposits are invested in $350,000,000 worth of Elevated company's bonds, it is essential that we right about face and protect those who failed to protect themselves, and protect them by abolishing the proved failure of private corporate control and management and substitute direct control with service at cost.

"Because public supervision, a half step in the right direction, has failed to do all that was hoped or expected it would do is no argument for going backward or standing still. The full step to public control is the next advance in the evolution of our street railway, public utility, problem.

Enjoy life! Don't stay bilious, sick, headachy and constipated.

Get a 10-cent box now.

Most old people must give to the bowels some regular help, else they suffer from constipation. The condition is perfectly natural. It is just as natural as it is for old people to walk slowly. For age is never so active as youth. The muscles are less elastic. And the bowels are muscles.

So all old people need Cascarets. One might as well refuse to put weak eyes with glasses as to neglect this gentle aid to weak bowels. The bowels must be kept active. This is important at all ages, but never so much as at fifty.

Age is not a time for harsh physics. Youth may occasionally whip the bowels into activity. But a lash can't be used every day. What the bowels of the old need is a gentle and natural tonic. One that can be constantly used without harm. The only such tonic is "Cascarets, and they cost only 10 cents per box at any drug store. They work while you sleep.—Advertisement.

DE WILLOUGHBY FACES DEATH AS DESERTER

Pseudo Captain Turned Over to Canadian Authorities by Immigration Officials

Percy De Willoughby, pseudo captain in the British army, will learn today whether or not he is to be shot as a deserter.

De Willoughby, who was arrested by United States immigration officials last Saturday, will be turned over to the Canadian authorities to take whatever action they may see fit.

A conference will be held today, at which time the man will make a plea for his life, asking permission to reenlist and wipe out his past record on the battlefields of France.

According to officers of the Canadian army, who took the matter up with United States Commissioner Skeffington, De Willoughby deserted from the British army and possibly from the Canadian. He also posed as a British officer, wounded in Belgium, and was sent to jail for swindling.

When he first came to this country De Willoughby was received with open arms, was wined and dined and received by the best families. In Washington he dined with Hon. Arthur Balfour and General Joffre, to whom he was introduced as ahero who had won the Distinguished Service order in Belgium. He lectured in aid of the Red Cross and in Boston delivered an address to 4,000 people, after being introduced by the British consul.

De Willoughby went to Syracuse, where he lectured. There he met Miss Alice Rogers Hueber, daughter of a contractor. They were married after a two days' courtship. De Willoughby claimed that he confessed to his wife, who left him at Niagara Falls, and that she urged him to retrieve himself by enlisting again. His endeavor to carry out her wishes led to his arrest at Hamilton, Ontario.

FIX ROUTE FOR LIBERTY LOAN PARADE

Governor and Mayor Will Review Marchers at State House and City Hall

Plans for the big parade which is to usher in the Third Liberty Loan on April 6 have been announced by the committee and the following route has been selected for the line of march:

Arlington street to Beacon, to School, Washington, State, Congress, Milk, Federal, High, Sudbury, Winter, Tremont and Boylston streets and to Park square, where the parade will disband.

An order, which will be put in this city, has gone out that no advertising signs or banners bearing any political, religious or advertising matter shall be used in the parade. Each firm will carry its service flag, if it has one, and the name of the firm or company having distinctive floats may appear, but it must be accompanied by the words "Buy Liberty Bonds."

Directors and presidents of business organizations are asked to march with the employes.

A reviewing stand will be located in front of the State House, where the Governor will review the parade. The Mayor will review it in front of City Hall and the Chief Marshal, Brigadier-General William H. Osborn and staff, in Park square.

MANY NATIONS TO TAKE PART.

As this is to be a citizens' demonstration no troops of the army or navy will take part.

At a meeting presided over by Alexander Whitcomb many nations were represented by delegates, who announced their intention to take part in the parade. Among those who will march are Syrians, Greeks, Russians, Poles, Jews, Armenians, Corsicans, Swedes, Italians, Letts, Chinese, Norwegians, Danes, Finns, Portuguese, Lithuanians and Hungarians.

A drudging, composed of women who have sons or husbands in the service will be led by the women who will wave a service flag for the largest number. Names for this honor should be submitted to Mrs. George H. Fearing, Jr., chairman of the women's parade committee.

A float representing Peter the Hermit will be furnished by the Copley Society. This float has been designed by Ralph Adams Cram and arranged by Hobart Abbott.

WAR WORK BY WOMEN

The School of Design of the Art Museum will furnish a float representing Joanne d'Arc, which has been arranged by Henry Hunt Clark. The Arts and Crafts Society under C. Howard Walker are working on a float of the ladies of the Middle Ages.

The corps of the war service work of the Women's City Club will be represented in a float under Mrs. James J. Storrow.

In case Sunday will mark the opening of the Festival of Britain, Joseph Pitts of those will enter a float showing the evolution of the American Women's Hospitals. These women have already organized into a unit for each week. Dr. Emily A. Hunt, chairman, and Dr. Agnes Vietor are on the committee for the organization of this unit.

MUST HAVE ARMY OF 5,000,000, SAYS WOOD

Half Must Be Sent at Once to France if U. S. Is to Win

By JAMES B. SOUSE
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Washington, March 26.—America must have an army of five million men and must have them at once, or be ready soon to the supreme battlefront in Europe.

This is the message which Major-General Leonard Wood brought from France to the Military Affairs committee of the Senate and delivered to that committee in executive session. It may result in action by the committee to speed legislation for raising the draft age and submarine patrol, but Senators present declined to comment on the drive.

"The supreme need of the hour," General Wood told the committee, is more man power. The sooner an army of 2,500,000 men is landed in France by the United States, the sooner will come the end of the war.

"The Germans have massed their full force in Picardy. Within another month or six weeks they will have completed their preparations. Then will begin the great drive which will determine the issue of the war. Unless we have a force of 2,500,000 men in France by that time, the chances are that the Germans will win."

General Wood told the committee that the British army was in the best condition of the war. He said that the British had been prepared for an attack in the west some months ago, but that the Germans changed the drive from the Flanders front to Picardy.

It was pointed out by General Wood that while the Germans are obliged to widen their advances now and then, each time around, the British have the advantage of smooth territory over which to maneuver their withdrawal. The roads behind the British drives also can be used by the retreating forces, but not by the enemy.

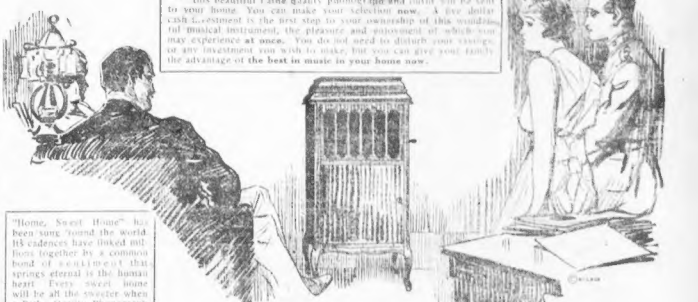
You do not need to disturb your savings or any investment you wish to make, but you can give your family the advantage of the best in music in your home now.



THE MOST many-sided and entertaining musical instrument in the world is the Phonograph. The Phonograph is a reproducing instrument. It not only reproduces the music of musical instruments, but reproduces the human voice as well, both in speech and song. Hence the common term "talking machine."

One of the world's great manufacturers of Phonographs is the house of Pathé

"Home, Sweet Home" has been sung 'round the world. Its cadences have linked millions together by a common bond of sentiment that springs eternal in the human heart. Every sweet home will be all the sweeter when a Pathe Quality Phonograph is installed.

The foreign house and originators of the Pathephone is Pathe Freres of Paris, France. The American house is Pathe Freres Phonograph Co., New York City. Nothing in music could be more fitting than an alliance between such a distinguished house and ours.

We have been continually identified with music in America since 1839—for 79 years. Our house grew in importance as the years went by, until today it is ONE OF FOUR of the strongest houses in the musical instruments industry.

Hallet & Davis pianos were used by Jenny Lind when she visited America. Franz Lizst, the greatest pianist-composer of all time, wrote of the sensation created by the Hallet & Davis piano at the Paris Exposition as far back as 1867, over 50 years ago.

How natural is it, then, that these two great music houses should unite their efforts to sell and distribute the product of one which should be in every music-loving home in the land.

We have the outlet and organization TO SELL and DISTRIBUTE. Pathe has the Phonographs and Records. Hence, two great opportunities meet. And THIS SALE is intended not only to introduce the Pathe Freres Phonograph Co. and their wonderful instruments and records to the people of Boston and throughout all New England, but to place in the good homes of this great section a lasting and permanent source of pleasure and entertainment such as can be had through no other known means.

MELODRAMA A GRAPHIC WAR PICTURE

By FRED J. McISAAC

That title "The Rape of Belgium," sounds like an effort to condense history to a few hours at the theatre the long and horrible tale of the four years of German occupation of a helpless country.

Instead it is a tense and entertaining melodrama dealing with a few inconsequential incidents of the great war. The scene changes from what was said on the stage in Northern France, not Belgium. The title is a misnomer and I understand it is to be changed right away.

Max Marein and Louis K. Anspacher combined to write this drama. Its theme recalls "The Conquerors" by Paul M. Potter, based on a short story by Guy de Maupassant concerning the conduct of the Prussians who invaded France in 1870. But the conduct of the Prussians of 1915 and those of 1870 doesn't appear to be very different either.

RECALLS "THE CONQUERORS."

"The Conquerors" created a great sensation when it was presented by the Empire Theatre Stock Company twenty years ago. The banquet scene in which the Germans compelled captive Frenchwomen to serve them was considered exceedingly daring, and few Americans at that time believed it a truthful picture of Franco-Prussian war times.

I do not think anybody will question the probability of any of the incidents in this play.

When the story opens a chateau in which two American women are living has been used as a residence for Austrian officers. These are ordered to the trenches and from the house over to a Prussian regiment, who immediately set about planning the subjugation of the ladies. An American aviator captured when his flier is brought to the ground, turns out to be engaged to the younger of the girls.

The first act, devoted to creating an atmosphere of Prussian brutishness, is very successful.

SECOND ACT LIVELY.

In the second act the Prussian colonel makes many attempts to overpower the heroine, and after a pursuit about the chamber, which is as thrilling as a similar scene from "Tosca," she pulls down a window curtain exposing the lighted window.

Following instructions for German soldiers in the street to fire a signal when lighted window, a fusillade caused the amorous colonel to drop dead.

In the following act the aviator, aided by an Alsacian in the German ranks, who pretends successfully several high officers, secures the diagram of the Prussian army corps guarding the village to another point, and enables the American troops who are opposing them to break through and take the town.

This play has its tragic moments, but it never gets harrowing. The incidents are exciting, and the narrative sounds less improbable than it sounds when condensed into a few lines.

TO STRENGTHEN PLAY.

The players are not yet satisfied with the play, and I am told that the first act will be greatly strengthened within a few days, which is good news, as the final curtain at present is not convincing.

A. H. Woods, the producer, has provided an admirable cast. John Mason as the Prussian colonel gave an intelligent and well constructed performance of a rather sickening role. Malcolm Williams as the Lieutenant-colonel created the impression of a brutal and insufferable Prussian officer, but why should he speak with a dialect when talking in German with his fellow officers?

The veteran actor Thomas E. Shea was earnest and eloquent as a French cure in his few moments on the stage. Olive Wyndham as the heroine played seriously and realistically. Conway Tearle as the American aviator was not as impressive as he ought to have been considering the prodigies he accomplished. Carl Gantvoort made an imposing Prussian general.

MODERN THEATRE—Mary Garden was shown pictured in her second screen play for the first times in Boston at the Modern Theatre yesterday in "The Splendid Sinner." This is a modern story in which Miss Garden enacts the role of a woman of the half-world whose knowledge of men and their character is complete, gained through experience.

"MELTING POT" IS SMOOTHLY PRESENTED

Zangwill's striking play, "The Melting Pot," is being given this week at the Copley Theatre, under the personal direction of Henry Jewett, which insures a smooth and finished production. The story of the adventures of a young Jewish immigrant in the United States affords the Jewett Players abundant scope for their varied talents, and the character portrayals are done with the fidelity of detail which marks the productions at the Copley.

David, a Russian Jew student, flees from Russia after the Kishenef massacre, in which his family suffer. He composes a symphony, and it is approved by an orchestra leader whom he meets through Vera, a young Russian social worker. She induces Davenport, a young, rich man, to produce the symphony.

Learning of Davenport's connection with the orchestra, David issues a circular against millionaires. Vera and David, equally in love, well sufficient income to marry. Davenport becomes David's rival, brings over Vera's father from Russia, and shows him to be a director of the Pogrom. David then deserts Vera, and the Baron returns to Russia.

Love will have its way, however, and Vera and David renew their troth on the roof of the Settlement House where Vera works. The finale, in their romance comes on the Fourth of July, just as David's American symphony has been played with great success before an audience of immigrants.

PARK THEATRE—The Park Theatre this week has an unusually attractive bill with Earl Williams as the headliner in his latest production, "An American Live Wire," in six acts. Having been spurned in a love affair, Earl Williams, as Geddie, goes as an American consul to a South American republic. He was just in time to intercept the elopement of the ruler of the republic with an opera singer. The ruler was also taking with him his country's money. Geddie then proves his worth as a consul, but captures the wrong party, only to meet the charming daughter of the captive.

GAYETY THEATRE—Joe Hurtig's "The Social Maids" opened at the Gayety Theatre yesterday, showing a well-balanced entertainment of vaudeville and burlesque. George Stone and Etta Pillard are the leading players of the troupe. They are both marvelous dancers, largely of the acrobatic type. Miss Pillard, with sensational new steps and effective songs of her own, scores heavily. Stone, in the part of a wandering minstrel, assisted by Billy Barrows, a most competent second comedian, provides the laughs, and they occur frequently from curtain to curtain.

ST. JAMES THEATRE—The leading act on the vaudeville bill at Lowe's St. James Theatre yesterday was an artistic musical comedy creation, "The Smart Shop," played by a company of ten people. A real book and lyrics and an original music score of tuneful melodies distinguish this offering from the ordinary. Foley and O'Neil, two Boston comedians, are as high in favor with their audience as did the topliner.

LIVELY BILL PLEASES AT ORPHEUM

Samsel and Leonhard, recently leading entertainers with the musical comedies "Flora Bella" and "Good Night Paul," topped the bill at Loew's Orpheum Theatre yesterday. They sang a number of their favorite songs, accompanied by Don Mathews at the piano, and proved a real headliner.

The surrounding bill included Saxton and Farrell in their clever skit of theatrical life, "Troubles of an Actress," the Dancing Kinneays in an unique series of whirlwind dances; Jim and Annie Francis in songs, dances and comedy chatter; Murray Bennett in a very funny monologue, and Dias' Monkeys, a band of simian performers.

The entire bill changes on Thursday when the leading act will be the musical comedy production, "Oh, You Devil."

Condensed Criticisms

Majestic Theatre—Jack Norworth, Harry Watson and Lillian Lorraine in "Odds and Ends," a review consisting of many sketches, bright songs and pretty girls. Last week.

Tremont Theatre—Last week of "Miss Springtime," one of the prettiest operettas in recent years, with the original New York cast.

Hollis Street Theatre—George Arliss in "Hamilton," begins his last week. A quiet comedy based on the life of Alexander Hamilton.

Colonial Theatre—Last week of "The Rainbow Girl," K. and E.'s latest musical comedy success.

Plymouth Theatre—The splendid run of "The Man Who Came Back" continues. A splendid entertainment for those who like melodrama.

Park Square Theatre—"Cheating Cheaters." Max Marein's clever farcial melodrama of crooks and detectives.

Wilbur Theatre—William Gillette, in "A Successful Calamity," a bright comedy by Clare Kummer.

COMING NEXT WEEK

Tremont Theatre—Leo Ditrichstein in "The King," one of New York's biggest comedy hits.

Majestic Theatre—"Getting Together," a propaganda melodrama with Blanche Bates, Holbrook Blinn and Percival Knight. Auspices British War Mission.

Colonial Theatre—George Cohan's latest Revue with Nora Bayes, and to be the cleverest thing yet turned out by the young playwright.

Hollis Street Theatre—"A Country Cousin," with Alexandra Carlisle. Written by Booth Tarkington and Julian Street. Said to be very bright.

Copley Theatre—"The Cottage in the Air," by Edward Knoblach, author of "Kismet," and "Milestones." First Boston production.

BEACON THEATRE—The two first-run photoplays at the Beacon Theatre yesterday, where they continue unchanged throughout the week, included the second photoplay picturing Mary Garden. This time it is a modern story, "The Splendid Sinner," and concerns the life of a woman of the half-world. The companion photoplay is "The Whispering Chorus," a strangely gripping story filmed from the published tale by Perley Moore Sheehan.

GLOBE THEATRE—"The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin," began the second week of its engagement at the Globe Theatre yesterday.

MISS TUCKER DELIGHTS AT KEITH'S

Sophie Tucker and her five "Jazz" kings of syncopation is toplining a dazzling anniversary bill at Keith's this week. Sophie, it appears, still has all the pep, ginger, zest or whatever it is that helps her put over popular numbers of her own fashion. She has also acquired, apparently since her last visit to this town last summer, a husband who is billed as Frank Westphal.

Frank's act immediately precedes Miss Tucker's, and in itself is really a headliner, although, as he says, he doesn't do anything much but talk a bit and play the piano.

At the close of Sophie's act after her "Jazz" and all its impediments has moved in front of the drop, Frank and his piano are moved into Sophie's act, surprising the audience. The call match "Over Here," written by Mrs. A. K. Pealg of Arlington, wife of the leader of the Keith orchestra, was played last night for the first time.

WALDRON'S CASINO—Joe Hurtig's "Hello America," with Sam Lewis and Sam Dody, assisted by Primrose Lennon in the principal characters, is the attraction for the week at Waldron's Casino. The company and its offering have been well named, for combined it is one of the greatest patriotic productions ever seen on the Boston stage. The picture shows that money is the root of all evil, but an appealing love story and thrilling and gripping situations take it one of the most sensational film dramas of the year.

LANCASTER THEATRE—At the Lancaster Theatre yesterday here was shown for the first time in this city the William Fox production, "The Girl with the Champagne Eyes," picturing Jewel Carmen as a girl nurtured in the atmosphere of the under-world who is brought to a realization that there are better things than thievery to be obtained from life.

150,000 TRUCKS NEEDED FOR 1918 WORK

Unusual Demand Is Forcing a Shortage In the Commercial Vehicle Market

By C. F. DONNOCKER.

The unusual demand for motor trucks this year is even now beginning to have its resultant effect in a shortage of commercial vehicles. While this was to be expected when one stopped to consider facts and figures, it was hoped that the shortage would not be felt for some time.

In speaking of the situation, Norman H. Halliday of the Mack Motor Truck Company, says:

"There are not now enough trucks available to meet the demand for quick deliveries and the orders for delivery at future dates are being taken with a clause to the effect that conditions may make delivery impossible.

"Practically every high grade truck manufacturing company has its product sold for several months ahead and the demand grows daily. Our own Mack trucks can only be sold in a limited number for from fifty to sixty day deliveries, and this in spite of the fact that our factories have been greatly increased and production doubled in the past six months.

150,000 NEEDED IN YEAR.

"Because of railroad congestions, railroad shipping priorities, terminal congestions and the general increase in many lines of business, also the enormous number of trucks needed to build and keep going twenty new cantonment cities of 40,000 or more inhabitants, the new terminal docks, shipyards, etc., it is my opinion that over 100,000 trucks of two tons or larger capacity will be needed this year. Add to this the after estimated number of 50,000 machines needed for the army, and it means a grand total of 150,000 motor trucks needed during 1918.

"During 1917 the total production of all truck making companies only approximated 40,000 machines of two tons or larger capacity. From these figures one can estimate how serious the shortage must be and this at a time when trucks are most needed.

"My advice to any concern depending on the railroads for hauls up to 100 to 150 miles is to place your order now, even though you do have to wait two or three months for delivery. Get your order in. A little bit later a good truck won't be purchasable at any price."

NEW FEATURE ON TRUCK UNIT.

Numerous truck making units are now on the market and each one has a feature of its own. The Amesbury Truck Unit, manufactured by the Unit Manufacturing Company of Amesbury, has several features that are exclusive. This unit can be attached to a Ford or in fact to any other chassis in the usual manner. It has an internal-gear drive rear axle. Radius rods are employed to take the stress off the axle.

One feature which stands out on this model, according to A. H. Sonn of the Jackson Motor Car Company, local distributor, is the patented ball-bearing cross member support. This is a support just back of the transmission box which takes the entire weight of the drive shaft off the engine, the shaft being supported on a ball bearing. This leaves the engine absolutely free to transmit power and prevents any possibility of breaking off the engine support arms.

PLEASURE CAR IS NO MORE.

"Although the pleasure advantages of the motor car are great," says A. J. Shotey, manager of the New England Vehicle Company, "the utility advantages far overshadow the pleasure situation. As a means of conveyance it falls in the same class as a street car and rail car—neither of which we call pleasure cars, although people derive great pleasure many times in riding in them.

"It is not strange that the misnomer has been applied to the motor car, inasmuch as it certainly opened up a field of pleasure which had never before been known. The adaptability of the motor car to business uses, however, is its great feature, and this fact at the present time has made the motor car more valuable than any pleasure use to which it has been put.

"The motor car is a short cut to more work; in other words, you can get through things instead of going around. Rest cures, nerve settlers and getting away from the old grind can all be taken at the same time behind the steering wheel on the country road or the unfrequented city streets.

"Motor cars are now built for longer service. It is a notable fact that the manufacturers at present are realizing the need of long life in automobiles. The development and standardization which has been the aim of the Velie Company has been continued in spite of the rising cost of materials. Prices advanced little more than a year ago. The price increases made necessary by the war period of material and labor will not be reduced after the war. The general inclination is to build better cars."

Appeals for Help in Finding Boy Lost 20 Years Ago

After twenty years of constant waiting for the return of the missing son, an aged father has appealed to the AMERICAN to aid him. Not once in the long span of years has the father given up hope that they would yet be reunited.

The father is Antonio Mangiameli of No. 88 Lafayette Square, Haverhill. He was living in New York with his son at the time the latter disappeared, but he states in his letter to the AMERICAN that he thinks the son is in Boston now.

The son's name is Salvator Mangiameli. He is also known as Salvator Miller, and is a barber.

WINTHROP CITIZENS TO PLANT WAR GARDENS

The citizens of Winthrop will plant war gardens on a grand scale during the coming season.

Alfred I. Marigold, whose war gardens last year received special commendation from the State Board of Agriculture experts, Arthur W. Dudley and other prominent citizens of the town, have formed the Winthrop Victory Gardens society, which will aid gardeners by obtaining seed and fertilizer and expert advice for those who will plant a garden. The society will also award prizes for gardens and vegetables of especial excellence.

Fear for Safety of Elsie De Wolfe in War Zone

By HENRY G. WALES.

With the American Army in France, March 26.—The report that the fighting on the scene of the German drive is nearing Noyon, causes apprehension here concerning Miss Elsie De Wolfe, who is operating at a special hospital, giving the ambrine treatment invented by Dr. Alexis Carrel, the American physician, in a small town near Noyon.

Many other American charities, including those that are rebuilding French devastated towns, are located in the Noyon section, where the fighting is going on over the entire terrain which the Germans evacuated a year ago in their celebrated retreat to the Hindenburg line. Before retreating the enemy blew up buildings, dynamited roads and cut all trees, devastating the whole area.

Editorial.

A French officer who is in this country instructing soldiers of our National Army in the modern methods of warfare, recently remarked: "If the war continues three years we will all be speaking English."

This statement goes to show the tremendous effort the English and American troops are having upon the people of France. English and American ideas are being adopted not only by the French Army, but by the civilian population through out France.

At the Receiving Ship at Brooklyn.

Another ball player who will undoubtedly become a habitue of Father Knickerbocker's main street when he rates liberty, as a result of his latest shakeup, is Arthur Daly.

* * *

R. M. Webster and Homer Snow, the two knights of the brush and paint aboard the receiving ship, have finished their work on the front and scenery of "Seaside Theatre." The ship's playhouse now looks like "a million dollars" in real money.

Paul, the receiving ship's mascot, seems unaware of the absence of his shipping owner, Chief Bootswain Lavey, who has been transferred to the New London training station. Paul continues in the same carefree manner to pursue feline pedestrians when out for his daily airing on Summer street. Males are immune and he suffers men not a glance.

700 MORE TARS "DRAFTED" AT PIER

Athletics Severely Crippled by Order Removing Men to Seaboard Stations

By Paul Whelton

Aboard the Receiving Ship, Commonwealth Pier, March 26.—The second large draft in three weeks "sailed" today on the rear of the receiving ship and as a result 700 tars are now speeding Gothamward tagged for the plains of Wiathoma where the receiving ship at Brooklyn is located. In this and the previous draft more than 1,300 men have been transferred to training stations along the Atlantic seaboard and to ships with the squadron.

The latest subtraction from the personnel of the Boston receiving ship deals the most unkindest cut of all to the fighting and baseball teams. A number of the pier fisticuff artists had already been drafted, and to this latest draft, in addition to putting the finishing touch on the clean-cut job, dodgers also Chief Yeoman Keith E. Murphy, one of the best blindfolders in the art of reciprocative pummeling of each other of present vogue, by the medium of the padded mitts.

The second blow is the inclusion in the draft of Chief Commissary Steward Connor, coach of the baseball team, former Notre Dame mound artist and one time pier team twirlers. Both Murphy and O'Connor will be at home after today.

FIRST COMBAT FIRING BY STUDENTS

Prospective Officers at Devens Effectively Skirmish on Ranges

By William Flynn.

Camp Devens, Ayer, March 26.—The members of the first company at the third Officers' Training School have the distinction of taking part in the first combat firing staged at this cantonment, and the men took to the new form of shelf training as a welcome relief from the trenches and irksome paper work.

The skirmishing was done on the machine gun ranges on the Harvard side of the camp under the brow of Wimpy Ridge. The company was directed at silhouette targets operated by members of the machine gun company of the 304th Infantry regiment.

The candidates at the training school were thrown out in squads and swarmed through the brush on their stomachs. The target of about the size of a man was raised in front of them. The first member of a squad to sight a target called him hand and the other members of the squad worked their way toward him and at a given signal the whole squad opened fire.

The targets were allowed to remain in view for a stipulated period and the candidates attempted to register as many hits as possible during that time. After one target had dropped out of sight another appeared in a different part of the line, and the operation was repeated. The experience was

HOLD SOLDIER FOR SPEEDING

Fitchburg, Mass., March 26.—A clash between military and civil authorities is expected to result from the arrest here of Trettie E. Fournier, Camp Devens soldier, chauffeur, on a charge of violating the automobile laws in Arlington.

A warrant, on which he was arrested here, had been previously sent to Camp Devens. Fournier told the local police that he had been advised not to pay attention to it inasmuch as he was in the performance of army duty when the alleged infraction of the laws of the road occurred.

ENEMY ALIENS FOR CAVALRY UNITS

Devens Men Ordered to Report Soldiers of Unquestioned Loyalty

By William Flynn.

Camp Devens, Ayer, March 26.—Instructions have been issued to all company commanders to send in the names of all enemy aliens who have applied for or are known to be of unquestioned loyalty to the United States. The men are destined to be transferred into the cavalry, but the reason for their transfer has been kept a secret by the military authorities.

A meeting was scheduled to be held in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium today of all the soldiers in the cantonment of Greek birth or descent to listen to an address on the war by one of their countrymen. This was in accordance with a plan to acquaint the soldiers of various nationalities with the reasons for the war, the part their countrymen are playing, in it and how it affects those countries.

Meetings of the Italians and Poles have already been held and a meeting for the Armenians is set for Sunday by Chaplain. These meetings are said to have been a great help to the government in maintaining the morale of the soldiers, as they afford the foreign-born soldiers an idea of why they are in the army and what they are fighting for.

Special rules have been issued to guard against the further induction of camp buildings during the general policy of the cantonment which starts tomorrow and continues through Thursday and Friday.

DECLARES DR. MINIFIE CAN REFUTE CRITICISMS

The Rev. E. F. Merriam, D. D., chairman of the committee examining the credentials of the Rev. Dr. W. C. Minifie, chaplain of the London National Guards, who has been lecturing in many American cities and upon whom attacks have been made by other clergymen, believes thoroughly in Dr. Minifie.

"It is not right to misrepresent a minister," said Dr. Merriam. "We have evidence that Dr. Minifie can easily justify himself when he arrives here. The Rev. O. P. Gifford of Brookline, who is speaking the Winter in Los Angeles sends word that his credentials are all right."

THE CLOTHES PARCHER THE BEST

YOU would be surprised to know how many men have revised their ideas of Clothing Economy—merely by wearing their first suit of Macullar Parker Clothes.

When a Suit wears on and on—holds its shape—sponges up clear and bright—it makes a man say to himself, "I guess there's something in that Quality talk after all."

War-time is a good time to switch to that sort of Clothes—if you really care to save money.

BEAUTIFUL HAIR, THICK, WAVY, FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Draw a moist cloth through hair and double its beauty at once.

Save your hair! Dandruff disappears and hair stops coming out.

Immediate?—Yes! Certain?—that's the joy of it. Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant and appears as soft, lustrous and beautiful as a young girl's after an application of Danderine. Also try this—moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt or excessive oil, and in just a few moments you have doubled the beauty of your hair. A delightful surprise awaits those whose hair has become faded or is scraggy, faded, dry, brittle or thin. Besides beautifying the hair, Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching of the scalp, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but real new hair, growing all over the scalp.

Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them, exhilarating, stimulating and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow long, strong and beautiful.

If you can simply have pretty, charming, lustrous hair, and lots of it, if you will spend a few cents for a bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and try it as directed.—Advertisement.

DRAFT HITS SCHOOL TEACHING STAFF HARD

Lawrence, March 26.—The draft has so affected the teaching corps of the local high school that a girl member of the senior class had to take charge of five classes in mathematics when the regular teacher of the same was forced to remain out by illness. Leo Higgins, algebra teacher, who qualified for army service here last week, was the sixth teacher to be taken. Two other men in the Lawrence schools have been passed on the medical advisory board. If these two teachers are accepted, the Master's Club, which comprises the men teachers of the city, will be out from twenty-six to eighteen members.

EAT LESS MEAT IF BACK HURTS

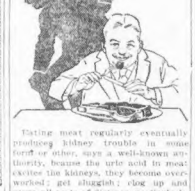
Take a glass of Salts to Flush Kidneys if bladder bothers you.



Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish and clog up, cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region, sharp twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then be fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.—Advertisement.

Indians Strong Team, but Not Quite Flag Winners—Are Happy, Peaceful Bunch

By HUGH S. FULLERTON.

CLEVELAND INDIANS—In military service, 6; liable to call, 7.

Poor Cleveland seems destined always to fall just a bit short. With a team almost ripe to bid for a championship, it slips—and it seems to have slipped again, although not hopelessly.

No team possesses the punch furnished by Tris Speaker, Roth, Harris and Chapman; no team with a fielding pair like Wambsganns and Chapman; no team with pitchers like Bagby and Klepfer can be counted out at this stage of the game.

This team has about the best spirit of any club in the American League; the players are more loyal to the management and to each other and they have a mutual admiration society centering around Speaker that is wonderful—almost like old college days.

LACKS THE BIG PUNCH.

But it seems to be a club that lacks that final finishing punch; that old follow through wrist stroke that adds forty yards to the drive. It fails when the final test comes—not through nerve or lack of courage, but simply because it can't go any further.

With such a pitcher to relieve the strain it might have a fighting chance of topping Boston and Chicago this year in spite of its losses and disappointments.

There appears to be something radically wrong in the system on which this club operates. Lee Fohl came into the major leagues with one great qualification for a manager; the ability to pick good pitchers and to condition them.

SLUMP IN FALL FATAL.

His reputation largely was based on the fact that he found and developed Morton among other pitchers. Since he has been manager of the Indians he seems to have fallen down right where he was considered best—in conditioning pitchers.

For two seasons the team has flashed brightly for a time—and then slumped away toward the finish. For two seasons Bagby has finished all pumped out. Last year the pitching staff was so dog-weary by the end of the year that the Cincinnati Reds trimmed them in the post series games rather handily.

Bagby was all in, simply through arm-weariness. Yet an examination of the records does not show that the pitchers worked much above the average, and a closer investigation seems to indicate that they were worked without much idea of conserving their strength.

Pitchers were worked out and benched, and then the next one to show form was worked until he was done.

TOMMY ROBSON MEETS RATNER AT TRIPLE A.

TONIGHT'S ARMORY CARD

Main event—Tommy Robson of Malden vs. Augie Ratner of New York, twelve rounds.

Semi-final—Harry Condon of Brooklyn vs. Larry Burns of South Boston, eight rounds.

Second preliminary—Henny Lewis of Lawrence vs. Bobby Dyson of New Bedford, six rounds.

First preliminary—Charley (Kid) Miller of the South End vs. Burt Jones of Revere, six rounds.

Referees—Larry Conley and Maffit Flaherty.

Starting time—8 o'clock.

By J. P. MURPHY.

Trained to the proverbial minute and feeling chipper than a prime two-year-old, Tommy Robson of Malden, one of the best fistic prospects developed in New England in many moons, is nervously awaiting the acid test of his career, for that is exactly what Tommy considers his twelve-round battle with Augie Ratner of New York at the Armory A. A. show, at the Grand Opera House, tonight.

Robson has gone through an intensive course of training for this bout, and he shows it. He has had the services of Henry Allen, one of the best conditioners in New England, and feels that the Cambridge man has done wonders for him.

Robson, a mighty heavy welter-weight at best, will give away considerable weight to Ratner. But poundage will be the least of his worries. He holds an old grudge for Ratner and the quicker he gets it out of his system the better. That, of course, is his own way of figuring.

According to all reports, Ratner is a rattling good boy. In his lone appearance here he snowed himself to be a mighty excellent prospect. On that occasion he won the 145-pound national amateur championship by defeating Charley Askins of Dorchester, who was some pumpkins himself in his simon-pure days.

Larry Burns of South Boston and Harry Condon, Brooklyn "iron man," will be the principals in the eight-round semi-final. The Triple-A. directors tried to secure Henri Le-Bouef of New Bedford to meet Burns, but the Frenchman's ears are in bad shape as a result of three hard mills last week, and plans taking a little layoff.

Referee Fleming Good to Young Sacco and Awards Him a Draw With Britt

Frankie (Young) Britt of New Bedford was handed a bad "deal" in his twelve-round bout with Sailor Sacco of East Boston, at the Douglas A. C., Chelsea.

He led in six rounds and held his own in three others. Still, Referee Dick Fleming rendered a draw verdict.

It was a poor dicision, but did not draw the deserved censure, probably because the "house" was dumbfounded. Or, maybe the Sacco adherents outnumbered those of Britt. After the mill, however, the fans talked freely and expressed surprise at Fleming's "guess."

About the only thing that entitled Sacco to a draw was his gameness. Outside of that he failed by a long shot to measure up to Britt. Sacco had a shade the better of the first five rounds. The first was even, Britt took the second, Sacco landed the next two and the fifth was even. From the sixth to the tenth, though, the Noddle Islander was outclassed.

Young Battling Nelson of Brooklyn, who substituted for Young Goula of Woonsocket in the semi-final, was awarded the decision overr Billy Carney of New Bedfard after ten rugged rounds. Carney was entitled to a draw.

Johnny Noonan of Dorchester defeated Tommy Elem of Paterson, N. J., in the second preliminary of eight rounds, while Bobby Dyson of New Bedford made quick work of Tootsie O'Toole, stopping the South Boston boy in one round.

"JOHN L." AS I KNEW HIM"

JAMES J. CORBETT. BY JAMES J. CORBETT. JOHN L. SULLIVAN

THIS is the thirty-second chapter of a series which James J. Corbett is writing on "John L. as I Knew Him." It relates many heretofore unpublished incidents in the life of the great warrior. The next installment will appear tomorrow.

My training camp program was rather strenuous and it didn't take me long to go from 185 to 180 pounds for my fight with John L. Sullivan. Meanwhile, sport writers, coming to see me in my workouts, wrote stories declaring that I was "altogether too small to have a chance with Sullivan."

Nothing worried me more than those articles. I feared that if my backers read and were impressed by them they might refuse to put up the rest of the $10,000 side bet. And I knew if they "dropped" me no one else would take a chance on me.

My fears were confirmed two weeks afterward by a visit from Phil Dwyer and Ned Kearney, two of my backers. They watched me closely during my workout. After it was over, Dwyer said to me:

"Jim, you certainly look small."

"But, I am deceiving in appearance," I answered.

And then it happened!

"Jim, what is your exact weight at this time?" flatly asked Dwyer.

BACKERS IN DOUBT.

I hesitated to answer for a fraction of a second—and then I said:

"Oh, about 200 pounds!"

Dwyer looked at Kearney and Kearney returned the glance.

"Two hundred pounds, you say?" exclaimed Dwyer. "By gosh, Jim, you don't look it. Where do you weight yourself?"

"Oh," I replied, "in a butcher shop up the street."

I feared to tell Dwyer and Kearney that I weighed myself on the gymnasium scales because I felt that they might want me to jump on—and my lack of beef would be discovered.

"I'm afraid those scales are wrong," declared Dwyer. "I don't think you weight anywhere near 200 pounds. You had better come to Long Branch tonight and meet me at the hotel and I'll have you weighed on those scales there."

LOADED DOWN WITH WEIGHTS.

After Dwyer and Kearney had gone, I hunted up Billy Delaney, and said:

"It's all off, Bill. Dwyer and Kearney think I'm too light. I told them that I weighed 200 pounds, and they want me to prove it tonight by being weighed in their presence."

"Well, let's try to figure out some way to make those fellows believe you actually weigh 200," replied the optimistic Delaney.

And before nightfall this is what we did:

We took all the weights out of the gymnasium pulley exercisers and jammed them into the belt which I wore during my workouts. We found around the gymnasium several pieces of flat lead, and these also were around my waistline.

I was padded with iron and lead almost from the line of my stomach to a point below my hips. And so, "made up" Bill and I started for Long Branch.

HOW WEIGHING WAS DONE.

The last thing in the world that I wanted to do was to be weighed stripped. To take off my street clothes meant almost certain discovery of my trick weight.

Everything hinged on my being able to weigh without the necessity of taking off my clothes. So when I found Dwyer I said:

"Here I am, Mr. Dwyer—all ready to weigh in. Shall I strip or will it be all right for me to be weighed with my clothes on? You can deduct about five pounds for my clothes and in that way arrive at my real weight."

"Oh, I guess it will be all right for you to be weighed as you are now," answered Dwyer. And I jumped onto the scales.

The dial moved around rapidly, they slowed and then came to a stop around 203 pounds. Dwyer was amazed and so were the others.

"By George," exclaimed Dwyer, "if I hadn't seen the evidence just now with my own eyes I would not have thought that you weighed anywhere near 200 pounds."

HERZOG LEAVES MIAMI CAMP IN A BIG HUFF

Haughton Turns Down Demand of Maryland Capitalist — Awaits Word from McGraw

By NICK FLATLEY.

Miami, Fla., March 26.—Charley Herzog, after being almost a Brave for a day, has taken himself and his suitcase back to St. Petersburg.

He met and conferred with President Haughton and the pair couldn't get any closer than Von Hindenburg and Lloyd George.

The conference was something like this:

Herzog—"Is this Mr. Haughton?"

Haughton—"Yes, is this Mr. Herzog?"

Herzog—"Yes."

Haughton—"Well, are you willing to sign if we take up your Giant contract?"

Herzog—"No. I want a $3,000 bonus and an extra year tacked on the contract."

Haughton—"Cannot possibly give it to you."

Herzog—"Cannot possibly play otherwise."

Haughton—"Good-by."

Herzog—"Good-by."

NEW YORK CLUB SILENT.

That is exactly what transpired between the Boston clubowner and the star secondbaseman. If anything had been heard from New York regarding Jimmy Smith, the conference might have been different. But not a word did the New York club send in.

Manager Stallings is more than inclined to concede Herzog's demands if he can get Smith. But there's doubt whether he can persuade his boss to the same way of thinking.

It was believed that Haughton had met Hempstead and settled things in New York on his way hither, but such turned out not to be so.

Accordingly, until the Giants declare themselves one way or the other, no further move in the matter will be made by the Brave officials. New York papers received here quote McGraw as saying that he would have no more to do with Herzog, and that satisfying Buck was up to the Boston club.

STALLINGS WANTS SMITH.

The Giants forwarded to the Braves a list of unknown athletes, one of whom might be selected as the remainder of the deal. But Stallings has refused to accept any one of them and will have Smith or it's no trade.

The chances are the deal will trail along till the start of the season, when Herzog will revert to New York and Doyle and Barnes come back to Boston, or the Giants surrender Smith.

The Boston club has the edge in the matter, but an appeal to the Board of Directors of the National League may be necessary before the trouble is ironed out.

The Herzog contract, which is one of those super-dreadnought, iron-clad affairs, is with the New York club as yet, and, if Charles Stoneham does not come to terms with Haughton, or the Giants refuse to concede the Smith point, the New York club will have to pay the big $10,000 salary.

HERZOG WILLING TO COME.

Before he departed Herzog stated once more that he was willing and anxious to play with Boston, but that he had to consider his own bankroll in fixing up matters.

He watched the Brave regulars take a fall out of the Seminoles, 4 to 0, in five and one-half inning combat, Crum getting the better of Hughes in the pitching end of it.

The latter started off gently and was nicked for three counters right under the guns, but after that was what is called invincible.

Crum, who is looking more and more like a regular big league flinger, was master of things all the way.

The series is now even at two games each and the rubber contest was to be played this afternoon.

BRAVES NOTES

By NICK FLATLEY.

MIAMI, FLA., March 26.—"If Bill James can come back at all," claims Manager Stallings, "the Braves will have a team that will be up one, two, three all through the season. Even without the Rabbit, and possibly Herzog, we have the makings of a speedy, fighting club. If I had that pair we would show them all something."

* * *

THE BRAVES are better off in the catching department than they ever have been, even when Hank Gowdy was in his prime. Hank was all alone, while at present there are Henry, Wilson and Tragesser, who are all top-notchers.

* * *

WHEN MASSEY shows in Boston, as undoubtedly he will, the fans will have a peek at one of the speediest youngsters that has broken in for many a day. The husky, red-headed chap showed the way to all the base runners in the Association for a couple of seasons. His work at third for the Seminoles has been so good that converting him into an infielder is being considered.

COURIER TABBED AS LIVE ONE BY COLLYER

By BERT E. COLLYER.

(All rights reserved by Collyer's News Bureau.)

Courier. The Kentucky contingent hopes to grab getaway money at Oaklawn with this bird. They're anxious to get back to the land of hog jowls and greens, so old Courier, a mighty sweet player, is to be sent after the coonskins.

He will be under colors in the sixth race and only needs smug handling in order to be on the front end of the procession all the way.

Martre only has to run back to that last good race in order to tin-can from end to end in the first race. Any price will be a good one.

Thistle Green is well liked by those close to the stable because of recent good trials. Mab and Sister Susie have the balance of the purse between them.

Frank Burke should cop the winner's portion of the purse in the second. He has been in the brine barrel for some time and this may be the spot for the awakening.

It's all over but the shouting in the third. Kama will come home nodding to the folks in the stand. He is as consistent as the sun and likes this track.

Grundy looks like a repeater. His last was a hummer. Marse Mouse is consistent and will go well. James T. Clark has not failed to beat form as yet.

The boys with the split-second watches send along Jocular as a special. According to the lads, it's only a question of getting enough money down. He is primed and cocked and this is the day. Nuf sed!

REAL DRILLING IS INTRODUCED BY SOX PILOT

Military Exercises to Be Daily Feature of Hose's Work—Hoblitel Is Leader

By HENRY L. DAILY.

Hot Springs, Ark., March 26.—Military setting-up exercises were to be in vogue at Majestic Park today for fifteen minutes before practice.

Every member of the Red Sox squad was obliged to take part in the drill, and the boys showed the right "pep."

Captain Hoblitzel was to lead the athletes. He received from Manager Barrow a printed pamphlet showing the latest system of calisthenics, the same as is in use in the army.

Hobby, armed with the book, was to take his class out upon the diamond and instruct it in its first course. This work will take out any of the kinks that should happen to hold over from the day before.

Hobby is delighted with the idea, and so are most of the boys. Squad drills will be started just as soon as the boys get the setting-up exercises down pat.

FIRST YANNIGAN GAME.

The long expected game between the Yannigans and Regulars was to be played at Majestic Park today. The Yannigans, captained by Joe Bush, have been issuing all sorts of challenges to the Regulars. They are a "chesty" crowd [illegible].

The game should be a hummer. Ruth will probably start for the Regulars and Bush for the Yannigans. It will give the players a chance to get in some real practice and also help aid in batting.

Paul Smith, who has been suffering from a cold, reported for practice today. He's O. K. again. Hobby, Evers, Scott and McInnis went into the infield workout with "pep" and soon had the ball speeding around at a fast clip.

PITCHERS GET DRILL.

Leonard, Ruth and Mays each took their turn on the mound and were followed by Bush, McCabe, Jaynes, Schang. Agnew, Mayer and Bowley were on the receiving end.

Whiteman, Hooper, Paul Smith and Strunk were in the second line of defense and took care of all balls that fell into their territory. The day was perfect for the work.

This Day in History

THIS is the anniversary of the death of Beethoven in 1827. To this day the works of this great composer stand by themselves as masterpieces, which critics believe represent the highest possible summit of genius in instrumental music. Beethoven was born in 1770.

Full Moon Tonight

MARCH, which opened with moonless evenings, closes with the splendors of a full moon. The March moon fulls tonight, but for the next four days it will continue to make the evenings bright. Summer full moons run low, while those of Winter run high.

THE GIRLS MEN LIKE

The Sweet, Unaffected Girl Wins Out Invariably in the Long Run

By Beatrice Fairfax

MASCULINE sincerity seems to be at stake.

Any number of my girls have written to me recently and begged me to reconcile the sweet, modest, home-loving girl men profess to admire with the gay and giddy creatures on whom they bestow their attentions. Here is a little letter from an anxious maiden which fairly duplicates dozens of other letters from dozens of other puzzled girls:

"Dear Miss Fairfax—Are men just a lot of talk or what? Recently an acquaintance of mine said that he didn't like a girl to use even powder. That he liked the refined type. That he had very little use for a girl who flirted and that he, even he—a man—cared little or nothing for chance acquaintances. But when I introduced him to my friends—sweet, refined girls—he almost ignores them. And he has been seen out with girls he would hardly meet in his own circle and yet has seemed very devoted to these questionable-looking, made-up creatures. How do you account for it?"

All Would Be Revealed

If I could entirely account for this situation all the peculiarities of human nature would be revealed to me. There are explanations of our own inconsistencies, but they do not gloss over the fact that inconsistent we humans are. Men do like sweet, refined, natural girls, and when they are thinking about it seriously and sanely, their good judgment makes them realize that they not only like but actually prefer "Sweet Simplicity" and "Miss Modesty" to "Paint and Powder."

So much for sane, human judgment.

We all know the story of the man who swore off drinking, marched proudly and bravely by three glittering saloons and then took himself into the fourth to treat himself for the strength of character he had just shown.

Human beings are like that. Men like modest, refined girls, but they have a "hankering" for the forbidden—the corn-silk cigarettes they smoked behind the haystacks in their teens, the stories they sneaked off to when supposed to be doing the chores, the runaway trip to the poolparlors on prayer-meeting nights.

The spirit of adventure, the desire for change, curiosity about the forbidden—all these make it normal, like—logical even—for men to prate of their high ideals and then gallivant off after that which is most completely unrelated to the ideals of their preaching.

Men philander about with pretty painted dolls. Some weaklings marry them. But real men may go wandering off after glitter and tinsel for a while, and then insist on purchasing sterling silver for the home.

When the sweet, fine girl gets desperate about the good times little painted ladies are having she daubs an unbecoming dash of rouge on her cheeks, brushes back her silky eyelashes with ugly, unbecoming black paint, powders the pink right off an ugly red and makes herself into an imitation of the sort of girl who seems to be liked by her men friends.

And the net results are a ruined complexion, a heartache or two and less popularity than ever. It doesn't pay to compete with experts in a field where they have all the data and you have nothing. It doesn't pay to make yourself over into a still cheaper imitation of something that was cheap in its original form.

Fall to Appeal

Perhaps some day men will be sufficiently sure of themselves and sufficiently impressed by the fine qualities in women so that paint and tawdriness will always fail to appeal to them. In the meantime it pays to remember that a man may amuse himself with a bit of tinsel—but that he buys the wearing qualities of sterling silver for his home.

There is no reason why the "sweet, refined girl" should be a prude, prudish, or preaching. She doesn't have to be goody-goody or to fail of sympathy and understanding for a man's big moments and of comradeship for his play time.

To Quickly Remove Ugly Hairs From Face

(Beauty Notes)

Beauty-destroying hairs are soon banished from the skin with the aid of a delicate paste, made by mixing some water with a little plain powdered delatone. This is spread upon the hairy surface for 2 or 3 minutes, then rubbed off and the skin washed to remove the remaining delatone. This simple treatment banishes every trace of hair and leaves the skin without a blemish. Caution should be used to be certain that it is delatone you buy.—Advertisement.

"Dreams"

In Peace and War!

By NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1918, by International News Service.

ONCE she dreamed—Miss Betty America—of gentle things. Pressed into her round pillow under her reading light, she read of crinoline and jewels and jealous step-sisters, of diamonds and moonlight and bewitched pumpkins, of powder and paint and magic, of roses and shepherds and gallants, once in a bit popping into her red mouth a sickish sweet candied fruit. And then, tucking in, she dreamed in the quiet dark, of mild and lovely things, of honeyed things, of dainty things and beautiful, without one hard or terrible emotion.

NOW—she dreams of things of iron and steel—of great-hearted things of huge ideal. Upright against her same round pillow whose softness is not so cared about now, under her reading light she reads of war and triumph, of high hearts and the men of her country and those of the great allies who do the impossible, heartbreaking, the glorious, of the thunder of big guns and the shutter-rattling sound of the machine gun, of dark destroyers that race between the troopship and the submarine under the gray and sultry sea and of the muddy trench, and the laughter and bravery of the "boys from home"—all in the evening paper.

And then, diving in, in a rustle of white paper and black ink, she dreams in the moving, hurrying dark, of great and hard things that women can only know and devour from far away of the sea, and the whale gray battleship in a smother of spray, and HER sailor boy riding its decks!—NELL BRINKLEY.

Why We Have Headaches

INSOMNIA AND SOME OTHER CAUSES

By Brice Belden, M. D.

HEADACHE due to insomnia requires study as to the causes of the insomnia. The insomnia may be dependent upon the eating of indigestible food at the evening meal, or to insufficient mastication due to defective teeth, or undue haste in eating. But loss of sleep entailed by insomnia is far outclassed by the loss due to merely getting up too late at night.

Hysterical headache is generally characterized by a peculiar gnawing pain at the top of the head or to one side of it, or else the patient describes a feeling as though a nail were being driven into the skull. Its duration is variable, and it is usually excited by emotional disturbances.

This headache is sometimes most severe in the back of the head and radiates to the temples and forehead. It may take on a neuralgic character. There is apt to be tenderness of the scalp; sensations as of pricking, burning and frizzling water are likely to be associated. There may be false delirium, rigidity of the neck and stupor, suggesting meningitis. But the pulse will be found normal, and there is no fever.

Habitual headache may be due to rheumatism. Atmospheric changes bring it on, and chilling after washing the hair. It usually begins in the back of the head and nape of the neck, finally involving the whole head and sometimes even the back and shoulders. Its victims are very apt to get the headache-powder habit.

A rare form of headache is due to chronic tonsilitis. It is obstinate and associated with disturbance of sleep, night sweating and readily produced fatigue. The tonsils have to be extirpated.

The periodical headaches of women and girls are due either to the absorption of poisonous products not properly eliminated, or to reflex impressions conveyed through the nervous system. They are apt to be associated with delays and pains of special and abnormal character.

The most prostrating of headaches is migraine. This is a one-sided headache of great intensity associated with nausea and retching. It is ushered in by pallor and disturbances of vision. The early symptoms are quite transitory.

Then the headache comes on and rapidly increases in intensity, concentrating on the eyeball and the region back of the ear, though it extends also to the brow, temple and back of the head. The prostration is very great and there may be collapse.

Attacks usually occur early in the day and last from six to twelve hours. The subjects of this distressing complaint are usually otherwise healthy. Sometimes the attacks occur with regularity, or are determined by some unusual strain or excitement. The more frequent the attacks the less severe they are likely to be. The mild cases occur once or twice a week and do not incapacitate the patient. They may be so extremely mild as to be hardly recognizable as true migraine.

Severe study, deprivation of sleep, anxieties and excessive social excitement favor the occurrence of migraine. Open-air life tends to prevent it. Defects of vision play a very important part in the causation and must be corrected. It is a disease that attacks people of superior intellect, generally speaking.

On account of its explosive and periodical character it is thought by some authorities to be a kind of equivalent in the sensory nervous system to epilepsy in the motor nervous system. After an attack the patient wants to sleep, as in the case of epilepsy.

Dandie Dinmont's Maxim

What is Dandie Dinmont's maxim? You will find it in Scott. It is "Blood is thicker than water," and it was once quoted in circumstances which the present historic turn of events between England and her old colony of America has rendered poignant. It is said, for instance, that the two navies have never fought together, and yet that statement needs a little pinch of salt.

As long ago as 1859, when England was attacking the Taku forts in China, Commodore Tatnall of the United States navy, though a neutral, not only helped to remove the wounded, but winked the other eye when some of his own men helped to handle the British guns, remarking that "blood is thicker than water."

The American crews lying at anchor off Alexandria, during the bombardment of the forts in 1882, cheered the Englishmen, and especially "Charlie Beresford," to the echo.

The Hidden Hand

By ARTHUR B. REEVE

EPISODE 14

Copyright, 1918, by the Star Company.

THE Hidden Hand turned just in time and darted back to where Ramsay had just struggled to his feet, throwing off his attackers and torn the curtains from his head. Before Ramsay could recover, however, the Hidden Hand hurled past and succeeded in gaining the secret panel through which he had planned to abduct Doris. He dived in.

With a concerted rush the Secret Service men succeeded at the point of the gun in backing the emissaries into a corner. The gang was captured at last!

Ramsay sprang to the side of Doris.

"The locket!" she cried, clutching at her throat. "Verda stole it!"

"Where is the Hidden Hand?" demanded the Chief.

Quickly Ramsay thought, then leaned over and whispered to his Chief, who nodded and beckoned two of the operatives aside.

"We'll let one escape," he planned. "He will lead you to the den. Get out, waft and follow. Then let us know here."

The Chief, Ramsay and Doris waited anxiously until suddenly the telephone rang. Ramsay answered it, and turned, excited.

"They've found the den!" he cried. "Come on!"

By this time the prisoners were all handcuffed. Leaving a couple of men to guard them, Ramsay, Doris and the Chief, with the rest piled into a waiting car and were away.

At last they might raid the den and capture the Hidden Hand himself.

In her apartment Sonia was waiting anxiously for the arrival of Abner with the will from the safety deposit vault. Surely he had had plenty of time to get it, she reasoned, glancing again at her watch. Why was he not here. Could anything have happened to him?

Finally she could stand it no longer. She went to the telephone and called Abner's number, though she did not think he would possibly be at home.

Up in his room, with the door locked and the windows barred, Abner heard the telephone ring. With fear, even then, he answered. Could it be another message from the Hidden Hand.

"Is that you, Abner?" asked Sonia. "Why haven't you come here with the will?"

Harassed, he scarcely knew what to answer, although even this was one relief. "Let me explain," he hastened. "I've been threatened"—

The sentence was never finished. A sinister yellow face had already appeared at the barred window and a moment later a poisoned dart sped straight to its mark in the back of Abner's neck. In pain and terror he cried out as he dropped the revolver, clutching at his neck.

Sonia heard, but did not understand.

Abner reeled and fell forward across the table—dead!

Meanwhile, along the Trocadero, was dashing the automobile with Doris, Ramsay, the Chief, and the Secret Service men. They pulled up some distance from the den, just as the East Indian ran up and rapped at the door. Seeing him, they climbed out and silently stole up with revolvers drawn.

As the priest-emissary opened the panel and then the door, the raiders, headed by Ramsay and Doris, dashed forward, but the door was slammed in their faces. Instantly the Chief fired at the face of the priest-emissary in the still open panel, and he fell dead, while the East Indian emissary fled down the passageway, shouting.

Ramsay did not hesitate. He reached in through the shattered glass of the open panel, felt around and slipped the bolt below. The door flew open, and all piled in.

"Quick!" shouted the emissary wildly as the Hidden Hand in his den, hearing the rumpus, ran forward to investigate. "They are here!"

In a wild scramble the master criminal and his minions fled by a dark passage downward. Just as Ramsay, Doris and the rest charged through the halls, with revolvers drawn. They swarmed about the place, seeking the Hidden Hand, as Ramsay, spying the passage, poked his way down it.

In the cellar the Hidden Hand ran straight to a corner where were casks and cans of gunpowder and a fuse. He lighted the fuse, then turned and fled, just at the moment that Ramsay came pursuing to the head of the steps.

Ramsay saw the sputtering fuse. There was no time to put it out. He

Puss in Boots Jr.

By David Cory

NOW, after the exciting adventure in the last story, in which, remember, the swift-footed Asa-lan-ta lost the race because she stopped to pick up the golden apples, Puss came across a woman and her son standing near a huge stone, and as he stopped to look at them, he heard the mother tell the young man to lift the great rock and that underneath he would find the sword and shoes which his father had left there for him. You see, his father didn't wish him to have them until he was strong enough to lift the great stone.

So the young man lifted it with ease and then, putting on the shoes and buckling the sword to his side, said good-by to his mother and started off for a large city called Athens.

And as he turned to go he saw little Puss Junor, so he said, "Come with me and be my comrade," and of course Puss was delighted and set out at once with him. And after a while, toward evening, they came across a ferocious savage, who always went armed with a club of iron and attacked all travelers who came his way.

And as soon as he saw Puss and Theseus, for this was the young man's name, he rushed at them with his great iron club upraised, and if Puss hadn't tripped him up by thrusting his sword between his legs he would have killed them both. But as soon as he stumbled Theseus ran his sword through him and took away the great iron club, which he carried ever after in memory of his first battle.

"And now, little comrade, who has so bravely helped me in my first adventure, let us go upon our way." And by and by they came to a place where there lived a dreadful monster. Now, this place was deep in the woods and the path that led to it was so crooked and twisted that it was impossible for any one who had once entered to find his way out, and this made it easy for this dreadful monster to kill all strangers who ventured into the forest.

But Theseus was determined to slay this monster, so Puss tried to think of something which would enable his friend to find the way back through the crooked path. At last Puss took out of his pocket a spool of thread and, giving one end to Theseus, cautioned him to be careful not to break it, for if he did he would be unable to find his way out.

And after that Theseus set off boldly and when he reached the dreadful monster he slew him with his sword and then, still holding on to the string, made his way back to little Puss Junior, who stood anxiously waiting for him.

ANECDOTES OF THE FAMOUS

The recent action at law involving the affairs of the fifth Marquis of Waterford recalls a good story concerning that somewhat eccentric nobleman.

Despite his wealth and standing in society, his fordship was of frugal habits and usually travelled third class on the railway.

This rather got on the nerves of a certain pompous official connected with a local line much used by the marquis. So one day he contrived to put three chimney sweeps, each carrying a bag of soot, into the compartment where his lordship was seated.

Lord Waterford, however, was equal to the occasion. When the train arrived at its destination he took the sweeps to the booking office, bought them each a first-class ticket, tipped them a sovereign apiece as a recompense for having to take an unnecessary journey, and sent them back down the line, sacks and all, each one in a separate first-class carriage.

Long years ago M Clemenceau, France's Premier, was dubbed the "Tiger," and no man has ever better lived up to his nickname. At nineteen he was flung into prison for shouting "Vive la Republique!" with his arms round a lamp-post. Today, nearly sixty years later, he is as pugnacious and defiant as ever.

He is a born fighter, and, with the exception of a brief period which he spent as teacher in a girls' school, his life has been one long, turbulent battle. He fought more duels than any other man in France, has brought down one Cabinet after another, and is the most popular man in France.

HELPING WIN THE WAR

Conserving Your Linen and Cotton. How to Remove Stains

By Loretto C. Lynch.

Instructor War Cookery New York Evening High School for Women

THAT the American woman is with the Government heart and soul in its policy of conservation is quite apparent from the hundreds of letters I receive from conscientious housekeepers.

"I am a well-to-do woman," writes a lady. "I have never taken much interest in my household, having been fortunate enough to have competent help. But now that husband and sons are at the front, I want to do my bit, even if only in a small way. What would you suggest?"

I suggest that you employ your time conserving the cottons and linens in your household. So much cotton is needed by the gunners who are striving to defend us.

And the aviators are calling for great supplies of linen for the wings of their machines.

Keep a Record

If you have kept a record of the towels, sheets, pillow cases, tablecloths and similar requirements, perhaps you will notice that your servants have asked you to renew them quite frequently. And yet you feel that these articles did not get particularly hard use.

It has been my experience that a lack of knowledge of simple household chemistry in relation to the removal of stains is frequently responsible for the short life of many a towel or tablecloth.

Do you know how to remove stains without "tearing up" the fabric? Here are some simple methods:

Grass—Wash the spots with warm white vinegar. This cannot be used in delicate colors, however. Try a little rancid fat on colored goods.

Coco—Wash in cold water and pour boiling water through the spot.

Coffee — Pour boiling water through it from a height. If resistant try a little diluted javelle water. Rinse thoroughly.

Fruit—Alcohol warmed over hot water dissolves most fruit stains. Also try pouring boiling water on the stain from a height.

Grass—Alcohol, as for fruit, may be used for grass stains. If these can be washed out, smear stain with molasses, then wash in hot water.

Axle Grease—Rub with lard and let it stand for several hours. Then wash.

Kerosene—This will evaporate in time.

Vaseline—Soak in kerosene before washing.

Grease or Oil—Use ether or chloroform. Gasoline is dangerous.

Ink—Place stained portion in sweet or sour milk. Let stand. Wash out. Remember, however, inks are made of a large variety of chemicals. It may be necessary to try other remedies. Two parts of hydrogen mixed with diluted ammonia. Rinse thoroughly. Try oxalic acid crystals diluted in ten times as much water. Rinse immediately and thoroughly. For red ink try ammonia and water or javelle water. Rinse thoroughly.

Iron Rust—Oxgall will always remove it. If not available, try lemon juice or weak muriatic acid with salt and expose to sunshine.

Medicine—Alcohol will dissolve most medicines. To remove iodine use chloroform or hyposulphite of soda.

Mildew—Wet in strong soapsuds, cover with a paste of soap and powdered chalk and put in strong sunlight for several hours. Try javelle water only as a last resource.

Paint or Tar

Paint or Tar—Use amyl acetate or fresh butter until stain softens. Then carefully rinse out in gasoline.

Tea—Soak in glycerine, then pour boiling water over the spot.

Red Wine—Cover with layer of salt while fresh. Then use boiling water. If it does not come out, cover with damp salt and expose to sunlight.

Yellow Wine—Wash with cold water, then with soap and water.

Use Cocoanut Oil For Washing Hair

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain unrefined cocoanut oil (which is pure and very inexpensive) does much better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use. Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get unrefined cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.—Advertisement.

THE WHITE MORNING

What Has Gone Before.

Gisela Niebuhr, a German-born girl of junker family, reflects on her past life and recalls the horror of marriage instilled into her soul and the wounds of her sisters, both by their experience of home life and the stories of an older married sister. She remembers how her two sisters and she herself vowed never to wed.

Now for the Story.

THE Grafin, true to her word, quietly disposed of the several suitors approved by her husband, and although the autocrat sputtered and raged—the Grafin, her youngest daughter shrewdly surmised, rather encouraged these exciting tempers—arguing that these three girls made fair to remain on his hands forever, he ended always by agreeing that the supreme office must necessarily be an alliance with the ancient and honorable House of Niebuhr.

The battles ended abruptly when Gisela was eighteen and a fat Lieutenant of the Uhlans, suing for the hand of the youngest born, vehemently supported by the Graf, had just been turned adrift. The Graf dropped dead in his climb. He left a surprisingly small estate for one who had presented so pompous a front to the world. But not only had his sons been handsomely portioned when they had entered the army, and Mariette when she married, but the excellent Count, to relieve increasing pecuniary embarrassments no longer enlivened by maneuvers and boudoirs, had doomed himself on the stock exchange. His judgment had been singularly bad and he had dropped most of his capital and lived on the rest.

Not at All Dismayed.

The town house must be sold and the Countess and her daughters retire to her castle in the Saxon Alps. As there were no portions for the girls, the haughty terrors of matrimony were laid.

The four women took their comparative poverty with equanimity. The Countess had been as practical and economical as all German housewives even when endowed by housekeepers and stewards, and she calculated that with a meagre staff of servants and two years of seclusion she would be able to furnish a flat in Berlin and pay a year's rent in advance. Then by living for half the year on her estate she should save enough for six highly agreeable months in the capital. Perhaps she might let her castle to a rich brewer or American, and this she eventually did.

Gisela was given permission to study for the operatic stage and spend the following Winter in Dresden, where Mariette's husband was now quartered. It was just before they moved to the country that the Grafin said to her girls as they sat at dinner in the dismantled house:

A Promise.

"You shall have all that I never had, fulfil all the secret ambitions of my younger heart. If you are individuals prove it. You may go on the stage, write, paint, study law, medicine, what you will. You have been bred aristocrats and autocrats you will remain, but you will not be that vulgarizes. Don't hate men. They have charming phases and moods, but avoid entangling alliances until you are thirty. After that you will know them well enough to avoid the fatal initial submergence. The whole point is to begin with your eyes open and your campaign clearly thought out. I, too, purpose to get a great deal out of life now that my fate is in my own hands. By the Summer is shall even be able to travel a little. Third-class, yet that will be far more amusing than stuffed into one of those plush carriages with the windows closed and forbidden to speak with any one in the corridor."

Always a Friend.

And forced to carry all the handluggage off the train (when your father had an economical spasm and would not take a footman while he stalked out first as if we did not exist. I shall never marry again—Gott in Himmel, no!—but I shall gather about me all the interesting men I never have been able to have 'so minutes' conversation with alone, and, so far as is humanly possible, do exactly as I please. My ego has been starved. I shall always be your best friend—but think for yourselves."

Gisela had no gift that she was aware of, but she was intellectual and had longed to finish her education at one of the great universities. As she was not strong, however, she was ordered to spend a year in the mountains; and then robust, and on a meagre income, she went to Munich to attend the lectures on art and literature and to perfect herself in French and English.

She took a small room in an old tower near the Frauenkirche and lived the simplest life probably to be found in any city in the world. She dropped her title and hardly bet she be barred from that socialistic community as well as discovered by her friends of course, and called herself Gisela Doring.

A Month in Berlin.

After she had taken her degree she passed a month in Berlin with her mother, who already had established a salon, but she was determined to support herself and see the world at the same time. Herr Doktor Meyers found her a position as governess with a wealthy American patient, and, under her assumed name, she sailed immediately for New York.

The Bolands had a house in upper Fifth avenue and others at Newport, Aiken and Bar Harbor, and when not occupying these mansions were in Europe or southern California. The two little girls passed the Summer at Bar Harbor with their governess.

It took Gisela some time to accustom herself to the position of upper servant in that household of many servants, but she possessed humor and she had had governesses of herself.

Her salary was large, she had one entire day in the week to herself except at Bar Harbor, and during her last Summer in the United States Mrs. Boland had a violent attack of "America first," and took her children and their governess not only to California but to the Yellowstone Park, the Grand Canon and Canada.

They traveled in a private car, and Gisela, who could enjoy the comfortless quarters of a student flat in Munich with all that life meant in the free and beautiful city by the Isar, could also revel in luxury and this wonderful Summer, following as it did the bitter climax of her first serious love affair, seemed to her all the consolation that a mere woman could ask. At all events she felt for it an intense and lasting gratitude.

It was during her first Summer at Bar Harbor that the second determining experience of her life began, and it lasted for three years. She dwelt upon it tonight with humor, sadness, and, for a moment, thrilling regret, but without bitterness. That had passed long since.

Her Own Mistress.

She was virtual mistress of the house at Bar Harbor, and as the children had a trained nurse and a head housemaid, under whom they, she had more leisure than in the city with her one day of complete detachment. She met Fräulein Frans von Nettelbeck when she was walking with her charges and he was strolling with the little girl of the Howland family. The introductions were formal, and as they fell naturally into German there was an immediate bond. Herr Nettelbeck was an attache of the German Embassy who preferred to spend his Summers at Bar Harbor.

He was of a fair type of German most familiar to Americans, with a large, slim military figure, deep, fiery blue eyes and a lively mind. His golden hair and mustache stood up aggressively, and his carriage was exceedingly haughty, but there were details too familiar to be counted against him by Gisela. Her rich brunette beauty was now in full ripe as her tall full figure, and she was one of those women, rare in Germany, who could dress well on nothing at all.

She, too, possessed a lively mind, and after her long New York Winter was feeling her isolation. Her first interview (which included a long stroll and a canoe ride) with this young diplomat of her own land, visibly lifted her spirits, and she sang as she bralded her heavy mass of hair that night.

Frans, like most unattached young Germans, was on the lookout for a soul-mate (which he was far too sophisticated to anticipate in matrimony), and this handsome, brilliant, subtly responsive and wholly charming young woman of the only country worth mentioning entered his life when he was too lonely and rather bored.

It was his third year in the United States of America and he did not like the life nor the people. Nevertheless, he was trying to make up his mind to pay court to Ann Howland, a young lady whose dashing beauty was somewhat overpoised by salient force of character and an uncompromisingly keen and direct mind, but who was far eclipsed by several millions that of the high-born maiden selected by his family.

A Heaven-Sent Interval.

Here was a heaven-sent interval, with its intellectual companionship in addition to the game of the gods. Being a German girl, Gisela Doring would be aware that he could not marry out of his class, unless a plebian pill were heavily gilded. To do him justice, he would not have married the wealthiest commoner in Germany. An American: that was another matter. If there were such a thing as aristocracy in this second country which pretended to be a democracy any whose "society" was worth noticing was of this sole of Gottingen. General ranse badly run-down this the highest rank in Germany she would have been a prisoner probably of a mediatized house, and, he confessed it amiably enough, she looked more like a princess naturally than several he could mention.

So did Gisela Doring. He sighed that a woman who would have graced the court of his Kaiser should have come from such a bungling fate into the rank and file of the good German people, so laudably content to play their insignificant part in their country's magnificent destiny.

Gisela never told him the truth. Serious amusement to his subtle arrogance, she was tempted. Also consuming love tempted her. But of what use? She was without fortune and he must add to his. He had a limited income and expensive tastes, and when a young nobleman in the diplomatic service marries he must take a house and live with a certain amount of state.

SEEK MISSING WOMAN WHOSE HUSBAND IS DEAD

Boston hospitals were searched today in an effort to locate Mrs. Frank L. Pendleton, who has been missing for the past week, unaware that her husband is dead. She is the widow of a burgess captain who was strangled to death in a fall from the wharf of the Connecticut River Power Co.

Mrs. Pendleton left the home of a sister in Lynn a week ago apparently to visit her husband who was then stationed at New London, Ct. She did not put in an appearance there and has been mysteriously missing since.

AGED WOMAN FALLS OUT WINDOW TO DEATH

Miss Marietta Hatch, aged seventy-five years, cousin of Mrs. W. E. Wallbridge, of No. 105 Elm street, Malden, fell from a third-story window at the Wallbridge's home, striking on the stone area. She sustained a fractured skull and was dead when help reached her.

Miss Hatch had been overnight and is believed to have fallen through a window in mistake for a door to the hall. She spent her Winters in Malden and Summers in Portland, Me.

General Gibson Says Every Soldier

WHO GOES TO THE FRONT

Should Take Nuxated Iron

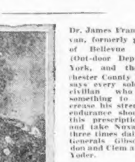
General John L. Clem, Who Was Sergeant in the U. S. Army at 12 Years of Age, General David Stuart Gordon, Hero of the Battle of Gettysburg, Judge Samuel S. Yoder, for 18 Years a Practicing Physician and Formerly Surgeon Major in the Army, Also Tell How They Were Benefited by a Short Course of This Remarkable Product.

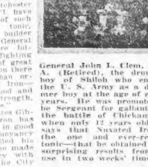
Dr. James Francis Sullivan and other Physicians explain why Nuxated Iron helps to increase strength, energy, endurance and build up weak, nervous, run-down folks.

"What every soldier must needs is tremendous reserve of there' strength, power and endurance. He must have steel and blood of iron. To this end Nuxated Iron seems to me to be nothing less than a positive necessity. Nuxated Iron is able as organic iron—Nuxated Iron as prepared by Professor Francis Sullivan, formerly Physician to the Cork (Ireland) Hospital, and other noted physicians—to make the blood rich, red and strong, and blood suffices to build up the nerves. I believe if General Gordon were alive today he could make many of our fighting men wonders. And I say this in no spirit of boasting, for there is nothing boastful about Nuxated Iron—I simply state a fact—and for anything that adds to one's strength, energy and endurance."

Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly physician of the Cork (Ireland) Hospital (Out-door Dept.), New York, and the Westchester County Hospital, says every soldier and civilian who wants something to help increase his strength and endurance should have this prepared for them and take Nuxated Iron three times daily as did Generals Gibson, Gordon and Clem and Judge Yoder.



Dr. Francis Sullivan

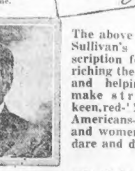


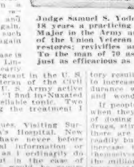
General John L. Clem, U. S. A.

The latest recruit to the honor boy of Shiloh who entered the U. S. Army as a drummer boy at the age of eleven years. He was promoted to be Sergeant for gallantry at the battle of Chickamauga when only 12 years old. He says that Nuxated Iron is the one and ever-reliable tonic—that he obtained more surprising results from its use in two weeks' time.

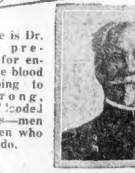
General David Stuart Gordon, U. S. A. (Retired), hero of the battle of Gettysburg; well-known Indian fighter. He says: "Nuxated Iron is my own advanced age, Nuxated Iron has made me fit and ready for another campaign, and if my country needs me, I stand ready to go."

General Horatio Gates Gibson, U. S. A. (Retired), who entered the U. S. Army from the City of Boston during the war of 1847 with General Winfield Scott. General Gibson says: "Benefit from the results in my own case, I feel that every soldier who goes to the front should take Nuxated Iron."





The above is Dr. Sullivan's prescription for enriching the blood and helping to make strong, keen, red-blooded Americans—men and women who dare and do.



Judge Samuel S. Yoder, Statesman, Jurist and for 18 years a practicing physician and formerly Surgeon Major in the Army and now Commander in Chief of the Union Veterans Union, says: "Nuxated Iron restores; revivifies and rehabilitates the system. To the users of 70 as I am it is just as certain, just as efficacious as to the youth in his teens."

Dr. Sullivan says: "Nuxated Iron is prescribed by Dr. Sullivan, and which has been used by Generals Gibson, Gordon, Clem, Judge Yoder and others with such surprising results, is not a secret remedy, but one which is known to druggists everywhere. Unlike the older forms of iron products it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black nor upset the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results in every case, or they will refund your money. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

"Service-at-Cost" Plan for Elevated Explained

This and the Public Service Commission's Plan of Public Control of the Road Not Hostile or Inconsistent

Quite a number of citizens have written to us requesting a further explanation of the difference between the Public Service Commission's plan of public control of the Elevated and the so-called "service-at-cost" plan which has also been presented to the legislative committee.

There appears to be an impression in the minds of some correspondents that the "service-at-cost" plan is a hostile, inconsistent alternative of the Public Service Commission's plan for public control of the Elevated. This is a wrong impression, if it exists. There is no hostility and no inconsistency whatever between the public control plan of our commission of experts and the so-called "service-at-cost" plan.

The "service-at-cost" scheme has been introduced and popularized and adapted from the Cleveland experiment by Mr. Homer Loring, representing the stockholders of our various street railways. This plan is merely a principle of operation by which the rider is supposed to pay what it costs the street railway to give him his ride. In detail, the plan involves the payment of the cost of operating the street railway AND THE PAYMENT OF AT LEAST A 6 PER CENT. DIVIDEND by raising carfares, however much, until they are high enough to pay the cost of operating the railway AND THE 6 PER CENT. DIVIDENDS. Under the Loring plan and also by the "service-at-cost" plan submitted by the Boston Elevated the dividend will really amount to more than 6 per cent.

The Loring plan and the Boston Elevated plan of "service-at-cost" also involves the abatement of taxes. In the case of the Elevated the abatement involves part of the subway rental. In the case of the other street railways the abatement must be directly out of the taxes.

Now, the Public Service Commission's plan for public control of the Elevated is perfectly consistent with the "service-at-cost" plan. The "service-at-cost" principle could be included in the bill providing for public control. The only difference between the Loring and the Boston Elevated "service-at-cost" plan and the Public Service Commission's plan of public control would then be the difference between the interests which the management of the Elevated would represent. Under public control the management would represent the public. Under private control the management would not. The Public Service Commission's plan would give PUBLIC TRUSTEES the power to operate the plan, while the Loring and the Boston Elevated scheme would leave the operation of the plan in the control of the present board of directors of the Elevated.

Thus the only question which the people of the Metropolitan District have to decide is whether they want the Boston Elevated directors to continue to control this road or whether they want public representatives to take control.

The astonishing eagerness with which the AMERICAN'S petition for public control is being signed all over this district by all classes of citizens indicates very clearly that public opinion is overwhelmingly in favor of public control. At the present rate of signing the AMERICAN'S petition for public control we shall have 100,000 petitioners for public control within the week. The AMERICAN has had much experience in circulating petitions concerning matters clothed with the public interest, but never has a petition been circulated which has met with such hearty, UNANIMOUS response.

The bill which the Public Service Commission submitted with its report was only intended as a rough outline. The details of the bill are being worked out by the Governor and the joint Committee on Street Railways and Metropolitan Affairs. If it is wisely drawn it will have the "service-at-cost" feature incorporated in a bill providing for public control of the Elevated, and it will provide also a sound and just method of purchasing the property of the Elevated whenever the people of the Metropolitan District wish to do so.

This bill will be one of the most constructive pieces of legislation which this Commonwealth has known since the Civil War in the direct and indirect advantages which will follow in its wake.

Is There Waste of Energy Here?

Yes, Waste and Loss Unnecessary

Copyright, 1918, by the Star Company

This nation is about to call for money—a few billions.

The money is in the country, otherwise the call would be foolish.

The money must be forthcoming and spent—otherwise this government and others would go under—and that would be more expensive than the loan.

In view of the facts, how do these headlines impress you:

ONE MILLION WORKERS FOR THE NEXT LOAN.

Nation-wide Advertising.

THIRTY-FIVE THOUSAND SPEAKERS WILL DELIVER ADDRESSES DAILY DURING CAMPAIGN, BEGINNING APRIL 6TH.

Common sense, a sense of duty and a little coercion are alone necessary to attend to the business of national loans.

This newspaper has printed the very sound suggestion of Percival S. Hill, an able organizer, as to the sane way of raising money for the war.

Study the income tax returns, find where the money is AND GO AND GET IT.

Don't waste the time of a million workers, or the words and lung power of thirty-five thousand speakers, trying to persuade a poor man to spend what he can't afford, or a rich to contribute five times his share.

Simply say to each man, "Your income is so and so. You can afford to buy so many of the bonds of your country.

"Here are the bonds. Give us the money. If you don't like it, lump it, BUT GIVE US THE MONEY."

Wouldn't it be better for the million workers to be weeding gardens—onions are very hard to weed—or planting potatoes, or doing something PRODUCTIVE?

A Dugout Somewhere in France

SIGN THIS PETITION AND GET DECENT STREET CAR SERVICE

The Mayor of Boston.
The Chairman of the Finance Commission of Boston.
The Public Service Commission of Massachusetts.

And many of the most clear-sighted citizens of this community have declared that the true solution of the street railway problem upon which the Legislature is about to pass is:

TO PUT THE BOSTON ELEVATED UNDER FULL AND EXCLUSIVE PUBLIC CONTROL.

So that every dollar spent in building its service up to fit the needs of our growing community may be spent solely in the interest of the People as a whole.

This plan deals fairly with those who have invested money in the Elevated, for it gives them the State's guarantee of generous dividends and the privilege of rejecting the plan altogether if they are not satisfied with its terms.

These investors are likely to get no return at all unless the State comes to their relief, AND THE PRESENT FIVE-CENT FARE IS LIKELY TO BE MUCH INCREASED WITHOUT ANY GUARANTEE OF BETTER SERVICE IF THE PLAN OF THE PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION IS REJECTED BY THE LEGISLATURE.

If you believe that this plan should be adopted by the Legislature, sign with your full name and address the Petition which appears below and forward it without delay to the Petition Editor, Boston American, No. 80 Summer Street.

Act in this vital matter promptly. GET YOUR FRIENDS TO SIGN. Do it now!

To the Honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts in General Court Assembled:

We, the undersigned, citizens of the Metropolitan District served by the Boston Elevated Street Railway approve of the recommendation of the Public Service Commission that public directors be put in absolute control of the Boston Elevated Street Railway under such conditions and limitations as are set forth in the recommendation of the Public Service Commission; and we respectfully urge our Representatives in the Legislature to do everything they can to enact the recommendation of our public experts on Street Railway matters into law.

SEE VICTORY SOON NOW FOR WOMAN SUFFRAGE

By Mary Hutcheson Page

President of the Boston Equal Suffrage Association for Good Government.

The good ship "Woman Suffrage" is ready for the launching. The flowers and cheers are in preparation, and even if she "sticks in the ways" for a little time yet it will not be for long.

For the statesmen not yet dead and therefore still politicians have had borne in on their minds the great fact of the solidarity of women in this cause. They cannot fail to see that a huge body of voters in New York and the Middle and Far West, unsatisfied for their sisters, and therefore for themselves, must not be ignored any longer. Susan B. Anthony said years ago that we should win suffrage when either of the great parties needed the votes of the women. Now that both great parties sorely need our votes, the way is plain.

See Victory.

To fail to take advantage of so obvious a knock from opportunity would be to write ourselves down as unfit for political privilege. We believe we have won, and nearly everybody believes with us, and most of those who believe in democracy at all are glad.

After enfranchisement the problem confronting suffragists of the older generation is simple compared with that presented to younger women. To many of us who have been working for suffrage for so many years the actual possession of the ballot will prove the loss of our chosen work, leaving us rather tired and not especially fitted by that training to participate in the entirely new activities now open to women.

We shall be citizens, to be sure, with all the responsibility for service that goes with the privilege. And women of all ages will fulfill the citizen's duty as generally as men without any noticeable strain on their mental and moral forces.

Young Will Lead.

But for leadership in the special activities to be started by women to make democracy safe for women and children, it will be younger women who will lead, women sensitive to the latest radiations of social thought, those trained in the colleges and the labor unions to modern, or, I might say, post-war needs and methods. They will contribute to political thought something different from man's contribution, at once more conservative and more radical than man's. It will be more conservative of life, health, youth and innocence; more radical in its attitude toward the comparative values of the dollar and the right to a fair life.

I predict something more of happiness in marriage, the home and the community by this change for the better in the status of women, this extension of freedom and reinforcement of civilization.

To My Boy.

By KATHERYN BEUTTELL.

Because it speaks the love and hopes and longings in every mother's heart, this poem, written by Mrs. Katheryn Beuttell of Cincinnati to her son, Private R. R. Linek, machine gunner, has been printed and copies posted in all Y. M. C. A. buildings at Camp Sheridan, Ala.

I AM all alone in the house tonight,
For the space of an hour or two,
And, in the glow of the warm firelight,
I am dreaming, dear, of you.

I think with a smile of your baby ways
And the odd little things you said;
I live again through your childhood days,
The days that all too quickly sped.

And still you are only a child in years,
With a man's real work to do;
I struggle between my hopes and fears,
But, son, I am proud of you.

I love in a tender, happy way,
The boy that you used to be;
What my heart holds for my boy today
Only One can ever see.

MOTHER.

GIVE PARENTS 31 MINUTES TIME EACH DAY

By Winifred Black

I READ a very interesting article the other day, all about what I would do if I were twenty-one.

It was full of good advice and common sense, and plain English and all the other things that are so easy to put into writing and so hard to put into life.

If I were twenty-one—what wouldn't I do! Dear me, it makes me gasp to think of it! And if I really were twenty-one again, I suppose I wouldn't even think of a single one of my good resolutions.

But, dear me! I can think of a whole lot of things I wouldn't do if I were twenty-one—can't you?

I wouldn't think I was the one great, important created being on earth, and that no one in the family had any right to anything unless I said so—just because I was twenty-one and had varnished hair and a little mustache and the right to vote in every State in the Union.

What Would You Do?

If I was twenty-one I wouldn't think that mother was old-fashioned and auntie was out of date just because they wanted me to think a little something about a man's character and little less about his looks—even if I had big, soft, bright eyes and could wear the smallest high-heeled shoes in town and didn't want to vote anywhere the least little bit in the world.

If I were twenty-one I wouldn't be bitter and cynical and hard in my judgments—I wouldn't expect every one to be perfect.

I wouldn't think that anyone with an income of less than ten thousand a year was an abject failure, no matter how fine and brave and noble the failure was, and I wouldn't look at every middle-aged man and wonder what on earth his wife ever saw in him; and I wouldn't stare at every middle-aged woman and think that I didn't see how her husband ever came to pick her out.

I wouldn't giggle every time anyone spoke of something serious, and I wouldn't sulk if someone with ten times my brain and fifty times my experience tried to tell me something I didn't know once in a while.

I wouldn't fill up my time reading serials and foolish little modern things, and forgetting that there was such a thing as a really fine piece of fiction in the world.

I wouldn't make fun of a girl because her clothes weren't in the latest style, and I wouldn't laugh at a decent young fellow because he was shy and didn't quite know how to get up and go home when the time came.

Think of Parents

I'd try to stop thinking about myself for thirty-two minutes and a half once every day, and I'd think about my mother during that time and try to feel the way she must feel once in a while, and try to understand why she looks so tired and old these days, and what it is that makes her step not quite so quick and light as it used to be.

I'd take thirty-one minutes and a half of each day and think about my father, and try to imagine what would have become of me if I hadn't had him in the background all these years. And I'd interest him for just thirty-one and a half minutes each day, and when he came home at night I'd talk with him about them and watch the tired look in his face change to one of astonished interest.

And I'd get over feeling as if mother and father had had their day, anyhow, and couldn't really expect to be happy at their time of life, and I'd give them my youth and my strength, and my joy and my courage, and my love of life and my light laughter to lean upon; and then, some day, when I was forty-one, I wouldn't sit alone looking into the fire and saying to myself:

"Oh, if I had only understood!"

And these are a few of the things I would not do—if I were twenty-one.

FROM PUCK

When he started dickering with the Russian Bolsheviki, the Kaiser paralleled the experience of the baby who poured molasses in the featherbed. He can't get them off his hands.
